WORLD AND SISTERS.

HOW THEY START ON THEIR JOURNEY IN THE NEW CENTURY.

Astronomer Mary Proctor Describes the Planets in Popular and Understandable Language—An Easy Astronomical Lesson, Which is Also Intensely Interesting at This Juncture in the History of the Universe.

It is interesting to trace the path of the planets as they circle around the sun, pursuing their wandering course—now high, now low, then hid.

Progressive, retrograde, or standing still. During the course of a year they are to be seen creeping slowly across the sky, the twelve zodiacal constellations forming their background. These constellations form a circle extending quite round the heavens, and eight degrees on each side of the ecliptic, or sun's apparent highway. If it were possible to see the stars in the daytime we would see the sun outlined against a different side of the zodiac each month.

The signs of the zodiac are as follows:

Aries The Ram
Taurus The Bull
Gemini The Twins
Cancer The Crab
Leo The Lion
Virgo The Virgin
Libra The Balance
Scorpio The Scorpion
Sagittarius The Archer
Capricorn The Goat
Aquarius The Water Bearer
Pisces The Fishes

The planets, in the order of their distance from the sun, are Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. Mercury is the nearest planet to the sun, going around it once in eighty-eight days. It is not easy to obtain a glimpse of this planet as it is usually lost in the glare of the sun's light. However, the most favorable dates for seeing it during 1901 will be about Feb. 16, 1901 and Oct. 12, 1901. It will be visible as an evening star low down in the west after sunset. On April 4, Aug. 2 and Nov. 20 it will make its appearance in the east as a morning star just before sunrise.

In the olden times the Greeks, seeing Mercury sometimes as a morning star and sometimes as an evening star, supposed there were two planets, and named them Apollo, star of morning, and Mercury, star of evening. The latter name is especially appropriate, since Mercury was the god of thieves, and this little planet steals more light and heat from the sun than any other planet in the solar system. The heat varies from four to nine times as much as we are accustomed to. Imagine what would happen on planet Earth if the sun's heat were increased fourfold, and the disastrous results that would follow the still greater increase tenfold. All life on earth would cease, and its surface, blistered by the blazing heat, and the oceans boiling and ascending in clouds of steam, would utterly transform our little world.

Added to this, the noted Milanese astronomer Schiaparelli called attention in 1889 to some permanent markings on the surface of Mercury, showing that the planet always keeps the same side turned to the sun. Consequently, there must be perpetual day on the sunlit side, while on the other side of the planet night must reign supreme. If there were oceans on Mercury at one time they must have been boiled off from the hot side long ago and condensed into ice on the cold side. Mercury at present then is a planet quite unfitted to be the abode of organic life.

Next to Mercury we find the planet Venus, known to the ancients as Phosphorus, the morning star, and Hesperus, the evening star. It surpasses all the stars in brightness, and sometimes is seen by daylight, provided one knows exactly where to look for it. During 1901 Venus will be a morning star till April 30 and an evening star the rest of the year.

Mars, the planet named after the god of war, is rightly to be found on visiting terms with Leo, the Lion, during the month of January, advancing toward the bright star Regulus by the month of February, going a little beyond that star during the month of March. Then it begins to retrace its steps during the month of April, and is just above Regulus in May, and about five degrees southeast of it in June. Mars will be a morning star till Feb. 22 and then will be an evening star the rest of the year.

The planets Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune remain the guests of Sagittarius, Archer, throughout the year, while distant Neptune will occupy a lonely position between Taurus, the Bull, and Gemini, the Twins. Jupiter remains a morning star till June 30; then it becomes an evening star for the rest of the year. Saturn will be a morning star till July 5, and then an evening star the rest of the year.

The reason Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune remain in one constellation during the year is due to the fact that these planets are not only at a greater distance from the sun than Mercury, Venus, Mars and our own planet, earth, but travel more slowly.

While Mercury hastens around the sun at a speed varying from twenty-three to thirty-six miles a second, it only takes eighty-eight days to make its yearly trip. Next comes Venus, moving at the more dignified pace of twenty-four miles a second, requiring only 225 days to go once around the sun.

Then comes our own planet, earth, which, compared with Mercury, apparently crawls along, but, marvelous to relate, its speed is nevertheless about nineteen miles a second—i.e., about seventy-five times as fast as a cannon ball.

Can we realize a speed so tremendous? An express train moves at a rate of a mile a minute; multiply that velocity by nineteen and it becomes nineteen miles a minute, but we must further multiply it by sixty to make it nineteen miles a second, and then only could it keep pace with the earth as it rushes around the sun. Let us take another illustration. We stand at the rifle range to see a rifle fired at a target 1,000 feet away, and we find that a second or two is sufficient to carry the bullet over that distance. Yet the earth moves nearly one hundred times as fast as the rifle bullet. Nevertheless, it must move with this velocity in order to complete its yearly trip around the sun.

Mars moves at the rate of fifteen miles a second, and takes 687 days in circling around the sun. Jupiter travels even more slowly, at the rate of eight miles a second, and takes twelve years in going around the sun. Consequently, it remains a whole year in each sign of the zodiac in turn, and that is why we find Jupiter remaining in the constellation of Sagittarius from January till December.

Saturn journeys at the rate of six miles a second and requires twenty-nine and a half years to complete its trip around the sun. Therefore, it remains a little over two months in each zodiacal constellation. Uranus slowly advances at the rate of four and one-third miles a second, requiring eight-four years to complete one trip. Thus, it remains seven years in the same constellation. Neptune, which is thirty times as far from the sun as we are, creeps around the great ruler of the planetary system at the tardy pace of three and one-third miles a second, and takes 164 years to complete the circuit. This accounts for the fact that when Neptune visits one of the zodiacal constellations, or houses of the sun, as they are termed by the Chinese, he comes with the intention of staying for the rather lengthy period of a little over thirteen years. There would seem to be some danger of his wearing out his welcome. Just at present he occupies a position midway between Taurus and Gemini, being in neither one constellation nor the other.

LANDSDOWNE'S PEDDLER ANCESTOR.

The Remarkable Founder of a Great English House.

Though he is one of the richest men in Parliament, and has a house in Park Lane worth a fabulous sum, the new Foreign Secretary is, or ought to be, a man of strong human sympathies. He owes his title and estates to a pedlar, who was so poor that he lived in Paris for three weeks entirely on walnuts. Managing to earn an honest penny, he took out a patent for a letter copying machine, wrote on art and science, and on chemistry and physics, summoned the first meeting of the Royal Society at his lodgings, invented a double bottomed ship to sail against wind and tide, founded iron works and opened lead mines, began a fishery and timber trade, and left a fortune to his sons. Such was the founder of the house of Lansdowne.

Whether his peddler ancestor's will has influenced Lord Lansdowne in taking the foreign secretaryship or not we do not know, says a writer in the London Chronicle, but in a remarkable will that he left behind the founder of the house conjured all his successors to "labor in public works" at their peril. "As for legacies for the poor," said the testator, "I am at a stand; as for beggars by trade and election, I give them nothing; as for impostors by the hand of God, the public ought to maintain them; as for those who have been bred to no calling nor estate, they should be put upon their kindred; and therefore I am contented that I have assisted all my poor relations, and put many into a way of getting their own bread; have labored in public works, and by inventions have sought out real objects of charity, and I do hereby conjure all who take of my estate, from time to time, to do the same at their peril. Nevertheless, to answer custom, and to take the surer side, I give £20 to the most wanting of the parish wherein I die."

Had the Right Idea.

It is related on good authority, and in this case good authority means good authority—that is no Kaligram—that a young woman went into a music store in the city the other day and asked the clerk for a copy of "Angels Always Polished."

"The clerk turned over a stock of coin songs in a puzzled way, and said out, but he could send for it."

"My teacher said you would be sure to have it," said the maiden. "It's by Handel."

New Century Resolution.

Resolved, That I, _____ of _____ will do my best to make life sunny to those around me; that I will keep the irritation out of my voice, if I cannot wholly root it from my mind; that I will look on the bright side of the "trying" people with whom I live, and try to show them my own bright side; that I will take no notice of petty things which will go wrong, and try to be contented with the condition in which I am placed. Also, Resolved, That I will not be discouraged if I fracture my resolution, but will do my best to mend it and go on as at first.

Care of the Tooth Brush.

One's tooth brush should be sterilized after each of its daily usings. A solution of formalin is said to be the best, one-half of one per cent, or even a bit stronger. Listerine and alcohol will answer and a solution of salt and water is better than nothing. The solution should be kept in a small, tightly covered glass, and after the brush has been soaked in some minutes it should be taken out and wiped with a towel and put in a dry, and if possible, sunny place, to dry.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets' which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."
