The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"Good housekeepers are not good homemakers," said a prominent club woman in a lecture recently.

"The housekeeper's eternal war against dirt," she went on, "makes her a slave and makes martyrs of her family. She has an idea that when she dies St. Peter will ask her how many pairs of socks she has mended or how many buttons she has sewed on. She does not know that it is better to be cheerful and sympathetic, the comforting home-maker, than to have kept the house in such immaculate order."

I think that this is a very good reminder for this time of the year.

"For this is the time when the 'eternal war against dirt' is apt to be waged most hotly and the martyrdom of the rest of the family to be correspondingly severe.

Now a perfectly immaculate house is a beautiful and desirable thing to be sure. Do not think I am denying that.

But when any other beautiful and desirable thing, a gown, a trip, a piece of jewelry—costs too much, you would think yourself weak if you did not have the strength of mind to turn your back on it, wouldn't you?

Then, when a perfectly immaculate house costs so much mental and physical strength that you cannot be yourself for weeks, is it any less a weakness not to be able to deny yourself that luxury?

In a story in a recent issue of a well known magazine a man and a woman are having a discussion about another woman who "works herself to a frazzle trying to make things nice for her husband" while her husband "doesn't seem to appreciate it a bit."

One of the marks of his lack of appreciation is that he seldom spends his evenings with her.

The man who is discussing the matter suggests that perhaps this immaculate housewife is too tired to make a very restful companion for a man who has worked hard all day.

"But she gets tired slaving for him," flashes back the woman who is discussing the matter.

The Busy Man let his paper drop and put the tips of his fingers together as he always did when tackling a legal problem at the office.

"Oh, that's just it," he said speculatively; "does she?"

For a moment the sheer audacity of it silenced the wife, but the "Of course she does" was emphatic when it came.

"Perhaps he'd rather have other outward and visible signs of her inward and spiritual grace. It may be, you know, that he isn't really keen about perfect housekeeping."

"Any decent man likes cleanliness and order."

"In moderation, my dear, in moderation. There's a type of women with whom perfect housekeeping is not a self-sacrifice, but self-indulgence. The rest of the family are the sacrifice."

I think that's a marvelously good analysis of the case. I take of my hat to the "Busy Man."

If a poll of all the women in the land could be taken on the question, "Which would you rather have, a perfectly immaculate house with a tired-out, nervous wife within it, or a normal, well-balanced, restful wife in a comparatively clean house?" I have an idea the result would be a unanimous vote on one side.

But I'll leave you to guess which.

So when you sally forth with mop and pail and dust pan and broom and all the other impediments of war this spring, suppose you take along with you mentally the motto that helped to make the Athenians the great people they were—

"Nothing in excess."

And suppose you apply it to cleanliness.

Trade Relations Between the United States and British North America

III.

In discussing this subject, the artificial frontier between the two countries must always be borne in mind. It cannot be efficiently guarded and high duties would always be modified by wholesale smuggling.

We had an example of this on our Southern and West Coast before I put the Bait Act in force in 1888. The large amounts earned by the bait carriers to the French—some $80,000 a year—used for the purchase of wines and spirits, tobacco and groceries was all smuggled into Newfoundland. Two old Church of England parsons abused me like a sweep for depriving them of their duty-free frog and tobacco.

Only the older ones amongst us can now remember the first Reciprocity Treaty with America of 1854. It was made permanent for ten years and could only be dissolved by either party giving the other twelve months notice, after the expiry of the 10 years. It was engineered by the greatest of all Canadian Viceroy's—next to Lord Dufferin—the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine. His secretary, who was afterwards here about the cable pre-emption, was the celebrated Lawrence Oliphant, who wrote an admirable description of the Governor-General's career in the Dominion.

The convention of 1854 was of immense benefit to both countries; Nova England got cheap coal from New Scotland; New York obtained its supplies of fish and the products of the forest from Newfoundland and the Maritime Provinces. All were satisfied with the arrangement. It was put an end to by the United States, not for fiscal reasons, but on account of Britain and her Colonies' sympathy with the rebel South. The North was enraged with the recognition by England of the Southern Confederacy and by the raid of the cruiser Alabama. In their mad rage they gave the notice, and firmly believed that British North America would be ruined within fifteen months after the termination of the Treaty. Canada became a nation; Manitoba and the West commenced to grow. There was abundance of gold in British Columbia and the country began to prosper and build railways, etc. From three and a half millions, Canada has increased to eight millions. It is because of her strength and her wealth, her independence and the knowledge by Americans that they cannot crush

Canada, so they are now discussing Reciprocity. All the intelligent and independent papers in the United States are recommending it and more intimate trade relations between the two great countries. A Bill is now before Congress repealing the duty on pulp and all materials for paper making. The tremendous revulsion of feeling to-day against the Trusts, Combines, and Protectionists Rings, added to all this will show my readers that the season is getting ripe for full fledged Reciprocity between the United States and British North America.

We shall come in as a matter of course. We are not rivals, we have no important factories, and for our population we are uncommonly good customers. Should all negotiations fall under the Act of 1905 we have a power of retaliation against America—we can put an export duty on herrings, etc. and a heavy tax on all American products.

I am not a prophet or the son of a prophet, although my name is Daniel, but any one can see by the cable message to-day that I was right in my prediction that Reciprocity between Canada and the United States would be brought about. Whom God and nature has joined together man cannot for ever separate. The two countries are geographically one, and international trade relation and closer commercialism cannot be retarded for ever. The Penian and the greedy monopolists may prevail for a time but not for ever. The East is no longer all powerful in the United States. Chicago and the West want Reciprocity and it will come and we shall have our share in the good time coming.

Wedding at Alexander Bay.

A very pretty and interesting wedding took place at Alexander Bay on Thursday, March 24th, when Drucilla Ida Jones, daughter of Ambrose Jones, J.P., and Frederick Browning Arnold, of the same place, were happily married. Miss Burton acted as bridesmaid, the groom was supported by his brother.

The bride looked her best in a dress of cream cashmere, a delicate wreath and veil. The contracting parties and friends marched to the Methodist Church and at the altar the ceremony was performed by the Pastor, Rev. John Hurst, then all returned to the home of the groom where Mr. and Mrs. Arnold and friends had placed a bountiful table before the happy guests.

Congratulatory speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Hurst, Mr. Ambrose Jones (father of the bride), her brother, Mr. Robert Jones, also a visiting gentleman. A very pleasing evening was spent and all joined in wishing the bride much joy and happiness. Numerous presents were presented to the bride, both parties being well known and respected.

"I know of no greater misery into which one can fall than the anxiety of studying the symptoms, real or imaginary, or the symptoms of the illness from which you suffer." So writes Mrs. E. B. Lendworth, of Lynn, Mass.

"I am a dressmaker, and can assure you that sewing brings a far greater strain upon one's system than is usually suspected. Often I am compelled to work with tremendous haste, and try at night to keep my health by drinking strong tea or coffee. Frequently during the night I would awaken with heart fluttering and find myself cold and trembling. Then my appetite failed—I grew thin and pale and was perfectly wretched. Then I began to watch for this and that symptom, until I fairly became haunted by foreboding and nervous anxiety. Now that I am well, I wonder at it all—but this I know—I wouldn't have been able to last another year had I not restored my health by Ferrozone. In every way Ferrozone did me good, braced up my nervous organization, gave me strong blood, good appetite, ruddy color and enabled me to sleep well. In ways that every woman can understand Ferrozone did me enormous good. I will always use it."

8702—A Simple House Dress in Semi-Princess Style.

A deep tuck over the shoulder in front and back gives the necessary fullness for this design. The waist gathers in easily at front and back and is joined to four skirt gores, that with the panel front completes the body portions of this desirable model. The sleeves are finished at the elbow with a neat cuff that is mounted on a straight hand cuff, which in itself forms a desirable sleeve finish. The back of the skirt portion has an inverted plait. This design may be developed in gingham, lawn, dimity or linen. Cloth in light weights will also be suitable. As a house dress or a simple afternoon gown the model will be very appropriate. The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 inches bust measure, and requires 7 1/2 yards of 44 inch material for the 36 inch size.

Blouses of figured net, of black and colors are made up over white silk linings. The net, of course, matches the skirt with which the blouse is worn.

Buttons will be used less for trimming, but more than ever for fastenings. An innovation will be the trimmed buttonholes, fancy braid being used for this purpose.

The shops are displaying much birthday jewelry. There are buckles, brooches, chains and rings, as well as scarf pins, cuff links and fobs, made from the different birthstones.

Anything Russian seems to be in style. The new Russian collars are of white linen, hand-embroidered, or of a fancy white pique, piped with a color to match the gown.

Overblouses of the cream-colored scrim are fashionable. They are made with three-quarter length sleeves and a square neck, a glimpse of all over tulle net being worn with them.

The colored lace veils which have been worn to some extent the past winter, will continue in favor through the spring. The white lace ones, however, have had their day.

Tulle, net and maline will be seen on the spring hats. Sometimes it is used as the sole trimming, again it veils flowers, and on still another hat it is in happy combination with flowers.

Tussor and foulard in endless variety are being displayed for the new spring gowns. These latter may be veiled with chiffon and raised from the level of the plain costumes of a few seasons ago.

Millinery signs grow very brilliant on white or black is a favorite. A wonderful Napoleon hat of red Tagal straw, faced with black velvet, has a waving pompon of magnificent scarlet plumes.

Pumps have at last been superseded by the much more artistic and comfortable "sailor ties." These are similar to the pumps, but have one large eyelet, through which is tied a loose, flapping bow of wide grosgrain ribbon.

The new ribbons this spring are most alluring. A very wide ribbon, probably intended primarily for sashes, comes with a fancy edge suggesfatal accident at Sydney.

Sydney, March 29.—A distressing accident occurred at the steel plant here to-day, as a result of which, John Lynch, aged about sixty, a native of Newfoundland, died this evening at the Brooklands Hospital.

He was engaged in dumping hot slag at the slag dump, about noon, when the accident occurred. He was standing near the burning lumies of slag as they rolled down the bank, when one of the hot pieces of slag caught him and rolled upon him, and before he could be removed, his both legs were horribly burned, being almost broiled off his body. He was taken to the hospital where it was thought that the amputation of the limbs would save his life, but the shock was so great to such an aged person, that he died to-night about seven o'clock. He leaves a widow and one daughter. A son of the deceased was killed at the open hearth furnace about four years ago.
