The Archbishop at Branche.

of the Assumption, was the day ap pointed for the administration of the Sacrament of Confirmation at the beautiful and thriving settlement of Branche.

This settlement is one of the mos charming spots on the eastern side of the country, and would undoubtedly be much frequented by summe visitors if it were only made more accessible; a very few hundred dol lars would make the Gut available for the coastal steamers. As it is at present, even the small craft of the fishermen can only set in at high tide. Inside the Gut a most delightful panorama is opened up to view. The nouth of the river spreads out into wide delta, studded with green and ertile "flats" or meadows where housands of tons of hay are cut annually. These natural meadows are irrigated every year by the spring reshets, and hence require no manure. A great number of cattle are raised here, and the merry tinkling of the cow bells makes the welkin resound with pleasant, though not over armonious, music.

The Archbishop and party drove ver from St. Bride's on Monday evening across the intervening twelve miles of bog and moorland. Hundreds of women and girls and boys were out on the "barrens" picking bakeapples, which are very numerous this year. The long level ride, a great contrast to the drive from Placentia, was somewhat monotonous but was enlivened by the flights o curlew and plover and the uprising of many coveys of partridge. These latter were never known to have been so numerous as this year. About a mile outside the village nearly the whole population, to the number of some two or three hundred, had come out with flags and banners and mottoes to greet the Ecclesiastical dignitaries. The whole road was lined with rugs and strewn with natural flowers. The horses were taken from the carriages and the vehicles were drawn by stalwart odies of young men:

The work of preparing the children for the morrow's function was at once commenced, the clergy hearing the confessions of the children, the Archbishop examining in Catechism.

and tasty summer 'garments, were parading the streets attending the early Masses, where all the candidates received Holy Communion. At 11 a.m. all gathered for Confirmation at the commodious new schoolhouse The new church recently commenced under the energetic superintendence of Rev. Fr. Fyme was not sufficiently far advanced to hold the Confirmation in it. The great concourse of people, between 400 and 500, being too large to be accommodated within the school, His Grace addressed them in his usual forceful and encouraging manner from the steps of the building. The burthen of His Grace's remarks was what he is never tired of impressing upon the people, namely the advice to the young men to stay home and settle down on the land and not to listen to the alluring stories of the wealth and happiness of those who go abroad. These accounts are all fallacious and many of our to pay postage.

young men and girls who have gone away would gladly come back if they had the means. Entering the school room, which serves as a temporary church, His Grace addressed the candidates for Confirmation on the na ture and effects of the Sacrament, also alluding to the beautiful festival of the day, the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin. The total number confirmed was 78, viz., 44 boys and 34 girls. During the administration of the Sacrament, Mrs. J. F. Roche presided ably at the organ while the choir sang Veni Creator Spiritus. His Grace then inspected the new church, which is far advanced in construction under the management of foreman William Collins. The building pro-mises to be of graceful design and William Collins. The building prosplendid workmanship. In the evening the Archiepiscopal party returned to St. Bride's again, accompanied by the usual manifestations of affection and respect, and round upon round of rousing cheers took the place of the volleys of musquetry heretofore

Much surprise was caused by the presence of a number of patrol waggons and a posse of police when the Allan liner Victorian arrived on Friday evening. It transpired that no fewer than 57 stewards were to be placed under arrest. When at Quebec the stewards were called upon to help land the mail bags. This of course was not part of their many duties, and seeing that there were numbers of dock hands present, they contend that they should not have been called upon to do this, especially as they were supposed to commence their regular duties three hours later, viz., 4 a.m. Upon arriving here the captain handed them over to the
