An Eastern Tragedy.

Towards the end of March, 1891, a disastrous adventure befell a party of Englishmen at Manipur, a small native state bordering Assam and Burma. The native ruler had seven brothers; one of these, who held the position of Senapati, or commander-in-chief of the army, deposed the king, and put a weak and feeble brother in his place as regent. The British Government was called upon to put matters right, and on March 21st, it despatched Mr. Quilton, the Chief Commissioner of Assam, with a small force, to Manipur to remonstrate with the Senapati. On the 22nd they entered Manipur, and were received with the utmost politeness. The Senapati, however, resolutely refused to appear, and Colonel Skene with 250 men, was sent to arrest him. His house was taken after a sharp struggle, but the wily owner had escaped. He soon reappeared at the head of a fierce artillery attack on the British Residency, which suffered greatly. A parley was agreed upon at a spot midway between the Residency and the Palace, and Mr. Quilton took with him Colonel Skene, Mr. Grimwood, Mr. Cousins, and Lieutenant Simpson, all unarmed, and without escort. The anxious watchers at the Residency saw that after a long talk, the whole party walked on, and entered the fort, the doors of which closed on them. The attack on the Residency was immediately renewed, and with the odds against them, and the ammunition falling, the Englishmen were in dire straits. Through infinite difficulty and danger they managed to retire across country to meet Captain Cowley's relief party, carrying seventeen wounded, and accompanied by Mrs. Grimwood, who displayed the highest courage and resource throughout. It was not until April 26 that the fate of the Chief Commissioner and his colleagues was known. Three columns converged on to Manipur, only to find the place deserted, the palace blown up, the princes fled, and the mutilated bodies of the Englishmen in the enclosure. The Senapati was soon afterwards captured, and after due trial, was hanged for his crimes on August 19th, 1891.

Removing Grease Stains From Leather.

While it is possible to remove grease spots on leather shoes, handbags, and similar articles by carefully sponging the affected parts with benzine or methylated spirit, it sometimes happens that in this treatment the stain is spread or the colour of the leather is altered. Hence the following method (devised by the Bureau of Chemistry of the U.S.A. Department of Agriculture), which avoids this difficulty, is recommended.

Protected by Rubber.
The stain should be moistened round the edges and then painted with a solution of rubber such as is ordinarily used by cyclists to repair punctures. After a few minutes the layer of rubber may be peeled off, when the grease stain, having been absorbed by the rubber, will be found to have disappeared. This method has the advantage that the treatment can be readily confined to the stained parts.

How They Do It.

(Grandbrook Courier.)
After a good deal of study and work we have at last figured out why so many editors get rich. Here is the secret of success: A child is born in the neighborhood; the attending physician gets $25, the editor gives the loud-junged youngster and the happy parents a send-off and gets $50. It is christened: the minister gets $10 and the editor $50. It grows up and marries; the editor publishes another long-winded, flowery article and tells a dozen lies about the beautiful bride; the minister gets $10 and a piece of cake; the editor gets $50. In the course of time it dies and the doctor gets $25 to $100, the minister gets another $15, the undertaker gets from $50 to $100; the editor publishes a notice of the death and an obituary two columns long, lodge and society resolutions, a lot of poetry and receives $50. No wonder so many editors get rich.

MRS. BUDGE SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

River Desert, Que.—"I used to have a severe pain in my side. I would be unable to walk fast and could not stand for any length of time to do my ironing or washing, but I would have to lie down to get relief from the pain. I had this for about two years, then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had had good results. I certainly got good results from it, too, as the last time I had a sore side was last May and I have not had it since. I am also glad of having good nursing for my baby, and I think it is your medicine that helped me in this way."—Mrs. L. V. BUDGE, River Desert, Quebec.

If you are suffering from the tortures of a displacement, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness, or a pain in the side, you should lose no time in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Attacking the MerchantsA THREE-DARE POLICY.

The political jobbers who now control the Government have set out on a campaign of slander of their opponents that must be repugnant to every lover of fair play and clean politics. The attack on Mr. Monroe by Premier Squires is a sample of the tactics being employed. Such an attack, however, will lower the Leader of the Government to the level of a common street corner orator. Mr. Monroe is one of our most successful business men, and the fact that he met with reverses is due to the destructive policy of Squires and Coaker. Coaker introduced a policy so vicious, so impractical and so out of harmony with common sense that he succeeded in demoralizing and paralyzing trade and Mr. Monroe, like others, had to suffer. The fishermen whom Coaker ruined were unable to pay for their supplies so that fishermen and suppliers suffered alike. It is, therefore, heartless as well as indecent, for Squires to refer in this way to the work of his own hands, his own friends involved in the transaction and largely responsible for the unfavorable condition of Mr. Monroe's business. Therefore Squires is unfit to be further entrusted with the Government.

An Appreciation.

To the Writer of the Menace of Coakerism, Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—I feel that the people of Newfoundland will owe you a deep debt of gratitude for the way you are showing up Mr. Coaker and his actions. You are fighting for a great cause, let me tell you, for I consider no cause greater than that of exposing a man who has had such a career as he has. I am so sorry for all of my poor misguided countrymen who have been duped by his unbridled tongue and pen that I have often longed for the day to come when someone would arise to slate him and unmercifully expose him. Keep up the good fight and show him up in his real character. I pity any man who gets his name mixed up with Coaker in any of his doings, for I can foresee the day they will hang their heads in shame at the thought of ever having anything to do with him.

Yours, etc.

NEWFOUNDLANDER.

Catalina, March 20, 1922.

They Have Learned to Know Him.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—I don't think it is fair for the papers to be making out that all the fishermen of the North are in favor of Coaker, because there are thousands, I believe, who have no use for him at all.

He will find when the proper time comes that he and his tools in St. John's will be no more able to gull us than Coaker himself was able to hatch out gulls on Dunnage Island. For goodness sake, Mr. Editor, don't let it be spread broadcast over Newfoundland that the fishermen are followers of Coaker, for we are not. I would be ashamed for anybody to accuse me on such an absurd charge, and I know of my own knowledge there are many others with the same opinions as myself. No decent man with a wife and family but should blush with shame at the thought of being a party to mix up with that fellow in any way, and I am sure every fisherman would be of the same mind as I am if they knew even only half as much about him as some of us know here.

Yours truly,

TRUE FISHERMAN.

Making Square Holes.

Most people cannot, and are quite sure that no one else can, make a square hole with a centre-bit, until they have seen it done. Certainly it does seem ridiculous to say that a tool turning on its own centre will produce a square hole. However, if the material to be bored is presented to the bit in the right way a square hole will be the result.

Dye to Test Death.

BLUE THREADS THROUGH SKIN THAT TURN YELLOW.

A remarkable new means of making certain that death has ensued has been discovered as a result of progress in chemical analysis by means of dyes.

By the change in colour of one of these dyes it is stated to be possible to make a conclusive test of death. Coloured threads stained with a blue dye are threaded through the skin and left there for an hour and are then withdrawn. If the blue colour has changed to yellow it may be taken, says the inventor, M. Silvio Rebello, to prove death conclusively.

Six Miles Glide.

DAILY MAIL WINNER'S STRAIGHT-LINE FEAT.

The French airman, M. Maneyrol, winner at Iford Hill, Sussex, last October of the Daily Mail £1,000 gliding prize, has made a glide from Vauville to Jobourg, more than 6 miles in a straight line. His glider (motorless aeroplane) was the identical machine used by him at Iford Hill.

The performance took place in a strong south-westerly wind, and will give to M. Maneyrol the £28 prize given by the French constructor, De Voitiere.

Whilst longer distances were flown in circles over aerodromes, this is the longest straight-line glide so far recorded.

So the Story Goes.
