Thursday evening Russia and Great Britain seemed to be on the verge of the attitude preserved throughout by the Emperor and Russian Government. While the Premier was unable to praise the pacific attitude of the Government too highly, he bitterly assailed Rojestvensky's report, declaring that it was an insult to Great Britain, as a eutral nation, and ridiculed its prob-

Mr. Balfour said if this meeting had been held yesterday evening I would not have dared preface my remarks in a hopeful tone. Everybody then felt if the trawler incident could be repeated, a belligerent fleet was indeed a pest against which neutral powers would be bound to combine. The only version we had on that lamentable incident of the previous Friday was the come back. version supplied us by the trawlers Thursday morning the situation changed, because, for the first time. we had the counter story supplied by the Russian admiral. In the story of our fishermen there was much tragedy. but no romance; in the story of the Russian admiral, there is no tragedy; but. I am driven to the belief that there is much romance. It is impos-sible to doubt which is the correct story. I should not have approached it, but for the fact that the admiral's story is really an attack upon our national honor, and implies that we are not doing our duty as neutrals. In an island kingdom, like Great Britain, the nationalty of every craft is known. It is inconceivable that we could be harboring Japanese sailors and warships without Russia and indeed the whole civilized world knowing it. I enter a most emphatic protest against such an allegation. The truth will be made manifest and clear as noonday, when the inquiry is held, which, in most statesmanlike manner has been welcomed by the Czar. But in bare justice to the Czar and the Russian Government, I will say they never at any time underestimated the gravity of the crisis or failed to do member the wheels of diplomacy move slowly, and perhaps the wheels of Rus-
