TORONTO

May 3.—Receipts at union yards were 760 cattle, 710 calves, 1200 hogs and 460 sheep and lambs. The run of cattle was light and the quality not very high. No extra prime steers offering. Prices steady to firm. Fat cows, bulls and milch cows firm and in good demand.

There was a heavy run of calves with prices a shade easier, except for anything very choice.

Hogs firm and packers' quotations 15c. Higher, weighed off cars.

While at work at H. Fraleigh's warehouse, Forest, where the roof was being raised, Wm. Walden fell off the scaffold, a distance of 12 feet. He struck on his head and shoulders, and sustained injuries to his spine which have since confined him to the house.

BYRON'S UNHAPPINESS.

His icy, Frozen Mannered Wife and His Cruel Parents.

Marie Corelli, the English novelist, says poets do not really love. If they did they could not write about it. They imagine they love. And their imagination embraces many fair objects.

"Byron," she says, "was an unhappy man. But he was not as unhappy as he imagined himself to be. He found pleasure, even inspiration, in dwelling on his own troubles. Many poets do."

She tells us that Byron's mother had been a Miss Gordon before she married the shiftless and dissolute Captain Byron, the poet's father, and that amid constant quarrellings, thrashings and unjust abuse and the most coarse and intemperate language poor Byron began his career.

"With such a father and such a mother," says Miss Corelli, "the wonder is that he managed to store his mind with so many impressions of beauty and grandeur and that he was able to lift his soul above his surroundings to such a height of intellectual power. His mother's furious temper and her cruel mockeries stung him, not into a reply, but into silent and lonely brooding on his wrongs."

"He himself describes the sense of horror and humiliation which came over him when, in a fit of passion, she called him 'a lame brat.' When Sir Walter Scott met him he said he should scarcely have noticed it. In fact, the great novelist was as lame as the great poet, only Byron's brilliant personality made him, more than Scott, an object of comment. His marriage was a failure. It was a fortunate thing for literature that his wife left him after one year of matrimony."

"Had she remained with him his genius might have perished under the freezing influence of such a paragon of propriety and dullness. William Howitt tells us that Lady Byron had 'frozen moments.'"

"I have seen her," he says, "come down in the morning as if she had lain all night on a glacier, frozen, as it were, to the very soul, and no efforts on the part of those around her could restore her for the day to any genial social warmth."

"The Wind is in the Palm Trees."

But the glory of palm trees! No pictures or description in books had ever made me realize that before "The wind is in the palm trees" had been for me but a haunting phrase in Mr. Kipling's most famous ballad, but when the bellboy threw open the door of my room (in Nassau of the Bahamas) looking into the hotel gardens I cried, "What is that sound?" for my ears had been instantly filled with a delicious rippling, as though the room was alive with invisible rivers of running water. I ran to the window. It was the wind in the palm trees—the freshest, purest, gladdest sound to be heard in the world.—Richard le Gallienne

A Delicate, Tasteful Breakfast.

Apropos of monotonous unimaginative breakfasts, Thomas Love Peacock once drew up the menu for breakfast "for a man of taste." "Coffee, tea, cream, eggs, ham, tongue, cold fowl," he wrote, "all these are good and bespeak good knowledge in him who sets them forth. But the touchstone is fish. Anchovy is the first step, prawns and shrimps the second, potted char and lamprey the third, but lobster is, indeed, matter for a May morning and demands a rare combination of virtue and knowledge in him who sets it forth."—London Standard.

Scotch Judges' Frugality.

Scotland might safely be backed at least to rival England in the matter of frugality among her judges. There is Dean Ramsay's story of the dinner party given by Lord Polkemmet. When the covers were removed the guests were surprised to find that the dinner consisted of veal broth, a roast fillet of veal, veal cutlets, a florentine (an old Scottish dish composed of veal), a calf's head and calf's foot jelly. Observing the sensation, Lord Polkemmet explained: "Oh, ay, it's a' cauf. When we kill a beast we just eat up as side and down the tither."—London Chronicle.

Good Start.

"I'm going to start a comedy company on the road in a couple of weeks," said the theatrical manager. "What play?" asked the critic. "Oh, I haven't that written yet, but I heard a good joke today that we can use in it."—Exchange.

An Explanation and a Hint.

"How do you account for his remarkable success?" "I don't know unless it was that he was always too busy on his own work to stop and spend time trying to account for the success of others."

Crowd of a Million.

It has been estimated that a million persons assembled in a crowd, with due allowance of three square feet a person, would cover an area of about seventy acres.
