ABOUT EXPLOSIVES.—Nitro-glycerine looks like oil. Workmen seeing it leaking from a box or can have some-stimes mistaken it for sweet-oil, and thave tried to nail the box tighter with a hammer. This causes a terrific explosion. The way in which the blasting powders are made is by taking some such substances as sand or sawdust and mixing nitro glycerine with it. The most common of these nowdust and mixing nitro glycerine with it. The most common of these powders is 'dynamte,' it looks much like moist brown sugar. Some others are called 'dualin,' 'rendrock,' 'mica powder.' The nitroglycerine soaked into the sand or sawdust can be carried about without spilling, and can be more safely handled. In the same manner, if nitroglycerine should be spilled upon wood or cloth and should soak into the substance, there might be an explosion if the thing were mings. afterwards struck or tossed about.
