

The April Number

CANADIAN PAINTINGS IN COLOUR.

In this March issue begins a series of colour reproductions of paintings by a well-known and highly-regarded Canadian painter, Mr. G. Horne Russell. These reproductions are being used as cover designs and frontispieces at great expense and are well worth preserving for framing or as examples of Canadian painting and Canadian scenery. The second of the series will be in the April Number.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF KHAKE—By J. D. Logan.

Here is a new subject by one who during the past few months has been discussing literature. Just now the man of khaki should be more interesting than the man of letters, and no one is better able to discuss the subject learnedly and interestingly than Dr. Logan, who is actually in khaki himself, and in England to fight for King and country.

THE SPIRIT OF THE NAVY—By Taffrail.

"We'll go to Heligoland or any other perishing place you like to send us." That is the spirit of the British navy, and it is here described by one who knows.

SERVANTS OF BYGONE DAYS—By M. Forsyth Grant.

In view of the present dearth of servants it is interesting to read the reminiscences of one who lived in Toronto when six servants was the complement of "an ordinary gentleman's house".

THE FIRST MILLER ON THE HUMBER—By Herbert Macdonald.

An unusually interesting historical account of the early milling days on a river, close to Toronto, which even to-day is still picturesque and romantic.

AN ADVENTURE IN YOUTH.—By Mary E. Lowrey.

A delightful confession in the form of a short story, with illustrations by Berthe Des Claves.
