> THE EXAMINATIONS AT LORETTO ABBEY .- The programme was, of necessity, a shortone, having been adapted to the brief space of time allowed for the exhibition. The musical portion, vocal and instru-mental, sustained the well earned reputation of Loretto, which was upheld by the Misses Moylan, Park, Low, Hayes, Gethin, Katie Foy, and Chaffey. Many of the other young ladies played with great skill and accuracy, but those mentioned are entitled to special praise. Gold medals were awarded to Miss L. Wheill, Miss McGee, and Miss McGuire, for honourable distinction in the higher branches; to Miss Park for superiority in instrumental music -harp and piano-and for honourable distinction in her English studies to Miss Hayes for superiority in instrumental music-piano-and honourable distinction in harp, English French, and German to Miss Katie Gethin for superiority in French, and honourable distinction in English, Italian, and drawing; to Miss Moylan for superiority in instrumental music-harp and piano-in English and embroidery—for honourable distinction in French, Italian, and German. Miss Moylan also obtained the large silver medal awarded by his Excellency the Apostolic Delegate for superior proficiency in Christian doctrine, and the first prize for calisthenics. Among the numerous articles of taste and skill exhibited we noticed a chair of exquisite design and execution in embroidery by Miss Moylan, which was universally admired; also an oil painting and chair by Miss Bonner. At the close of the distribution Very Rev. Vicar-General Rooney, in a few well timed remarks, congratulated the nuns and the young ladies upon the happy and successful termination of the scholastic year.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY, LONDON, ONT .- The closing exercises of this popular educational institution, took place on the 28th ult-, in the presence of His Lordship Bishop Walsh and a large number of the clergy from various parts of the diocese. The Exhibition Hall of the Academy was chosen for this purpose. The room was tastefully decorated with pale green tulle, over white, and grace-fully festooned with rich gold links, while beautiful baskets, filled with fresh flowers, waved to and fro, diffusing a most fragrant perfume throughout the apartment. This, together with the bright and happy faces of the eighty pupils, all combined to make us forget for a while the outer world with its trials and anxieties. The children seemed the very picture of contentment, and although all were anxious to be again with their friends at home, yet the parting from the convent, even for vacation seemed to bring with it a certain degree of sorrow. The behaviour of the children at the examination a few days since and yesterday during the distribution of premiums demonstrated how thorough the system of training is in every respect. Special mention should be made of the beautiful valedictory address of Miss Carrie Tale, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Those on who were present were agreeably surprised at the beautys nd excllence of the composition. It is one in which words are made to convey the feelings of the heart of the speaker; no cold formality of style but the ardent, warm impulse of a fond, and tender, heart bidding a final farewell to the home of her igirlhood. To wards the close of the address, all, present were moved by the touching adien she bade her teachers, and all hoped albappy and successful future was in store for the gold medal graduate, from Brooklyn. At the close of the exercises His Lordship, Bishop Walsh complimented the scholars and teachers, on the happy and successful ending of the school term. The waledictory address actuated by this motive, and a conscientious desire He paid a special tribute to the valedictory address of Miss Yale, which he said was the finest he had ever heard. His Lordship gave the children some sound advice, which they will not be likely to forget during vrcation.

LORETTO CONVENT, QUELPH-CLOSING EXERCISES [AND DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.—On Thursday the annual Street, Philadelphia, Pa. for young ladies took place in the school room. The opening of the programme commenced at three o'clock, when the room was completely filled with the parents and friends of the pupils:" Immediately in front of the raised dais were seared Father Hammell, S. J., Rev. Father Chartier, S. J. and Rev. Father Keough, of Walkerton. The dais was carpeted, on which were four planes, organ, harp, ctc., and the whole beautifully set off with flowers, and evergreens, gracefully twined around the pedestals at either side, and the wall at the back. The manner in which the very lengthy programme was carried out reflected credit not only on the ladies of Loretto, but also on the pupils themselves, who all looked handsome and smiling in neat costumes of white. The crowning of the following graduates by the Rev. Father Hammell took place in the first part of the programme:—Misses Nellie Murphy, Mary Carey, S. Woodcock, Lizzie Downey: The carrying out of that part of the programme, allotted to the young ladies or larger pupils indicated a great proficiency in music especially, while the younger ones, not so far advanced in the study, were equally creditable. It would be simply impossible to deal with the exercises in detail, but at the same time several pieces are worthy of special mention. Miss Nellie Murphy's playing on the piano was much appreciated for its brilliancy, as well as for the charming touch she possesses in fingering the keys. Her singing was also good her voice showing considerable culture. Miss Paulson sang "Esmeralda" with excellent effect, and Misses Doran and Murphy in the beautiful ballad, 'The Last Rose of Summer," were very pleasing. One of the most pleasing pieces on the programme was the recitation, "Papa's Letter," by little Miss Dayton. There was real pathos and expression thrown into the piece which made it particularly pleasing. With scarcely an exception the instru-mental music was all good. In the duets and trios the four pianos were brought into requisition, and the correct time observed was marked, "Hymne, Triumphale," by Misses Casey, Coffee, O'Connor and Murphy on the organ was well executed, the music chorus was sweetly given and the words were appropriate. The programme concluded with the "Angel of Loretto's address to all," and the distribution of prizes, little Miss Crookall reading the names off, and little Miss Davis handing the prizes, which consisted of gold and silver medals, books and wreaths, to Rev. Father Hammell, who presented them to successful pupils. After the prizes had all been distributed the Reverend gentleman addressed the children briefly, and complimented them on the progress they had made in their studies, as was indicated from the manner in which the very interesting entertainment had passed. It also showed clearly that the method of teaching pursued by the ladies of Loretto was in every respect a superior one. The harmony with which the school was carried on, and the attachmen: existing between teachers and pupils was also happily alluded to. In one of the rooms adjaining the examination hall a large number of fancy and useful articles made by the pupils were displayed. The work in every case showed that the pupils had been instructed by thoroughly competent tachers. and that much care and perseverance had been exercised by the pupils themselves. The work partook principally of oil maintings, water colored, crayon and pencil drawings, sofa pillovs, wax flowers and fruit, needle work, embroiday, &c .-Mercury.
