requirements for language competence; requiring that French be a language of business, and the Courts, and so forth?

What do you foresee there, under this Federal relationship?

MINISTER LALONDE: Well, what we want to have in the Canadian Constitution -- something that we don't have at the present time -- is a Charter of Human Rights which is entrenched in the Constitution like it is in the American Constitution. And under that Constitution, we would like to see, entrenched, a certain number of linguistic rights -- linguistic rights which would obviously protect the French minorities outside of Quebec but, also, protect the English speaking minority inside of Quebec. And we would like those rights to be equal. They correspond, essentially, to the right to be served by your Government Federal or Provincial -- in one or the other of the official languages; if there are enough people in the community to support the minority language to support that kind of service.

MR. ANDERSON: Would that include the right to choose the language in which your child was instructed in school?

MINISTER LALONDE: We are looking at this situation. What it would surely include, I think as a basic-minimum proposition, would be that, if you speak one or the
