Much of the future buying in the market, whether for Canadian or outside account, will be made in the same way as that now in effect in Trethewey. The property will have to show intrinste value before investors will be willing into buy into the shares. This wil cause a much narrower market than has been in effect since the miling boom started, but it will at the same time give a greater stability to quotations, and improvements in prices made will be more easily maintained. Good development work is going on now under better weather conditions, and a few weeks hence will see the output from the camp considerably increased. This in itself will provide a foundation for a recovery in public sentiment.
