Only Yesterday

a lady customer, who had just purchased a pair of our new line of Ladies' Fall Boots, at $1 98 a pair, said:

"Mr. Cook, how comes it that you can sell this shoe for $1 98 when I have always paid at least $2 50 for the same shoe at Mr. ———'s?"

The reply we made was: "Do you get credit at Mr. ———'s?"

She answered, "Yes."

"Do you get credit here?"

She laughed and answered, "No."

"This answers the question. It's merely the difference between cash and credit. When you pay Mr. ——— $2 50 for this shoe you are paying him for the losses sustained by doing a credit business."

Think this over.

A FASHODA BLUE BOOK

Correspondence Between the British and French Authorities.

Salisbury Takes a Firm Stand in the Matter.

Britain Will Not Admit of a Compromise in the Case.

The Situation Considered Very Grave—Salisbury's Course Sustained by the London Press.

London, Oct. 10.—The foreign office has issued a Fashoda blue book, giving the correspondence between the French and British Governments.

It begins with a dispatch dated Dec. 10, 1897, from Sir Edmund Monson, British ambassador at Paris, to Lord Salisbury, referring to rumors of the massacre of the Marchand expedition, and expressing the ambassador's satisfaction that he has been allowed to acquaint M. Hanotaux, French foreign minister, with Lord Salisbury's view that, if other questions are adjusted, Great Britain will make no difficulty regarding the French claim on the northern and eastern shores of Lake Tchad. The right of any European power, except Great Britain, to occupy any part of the Nile Valley, however, is not admitted.

M. Hanotaux replied on Dec. 24 in a long dispatch of respectful protest against Lord Salisbury's views.

THE BLUE NILE EXPEDITION.

On Aug. 2 of this year Lord Salisbury wrote Lord Cromer, British diplomatic agent at Cairo, giving him instructions that, after the capture of Khartoum, two of the flotillas should ascend to Fashoda and go up the Blue Nile as far as it should prove navigable for steamers. Under these instructions, the sirdar was to personally command the Fashoda expedition, and to take a few troops if desirable, the object being to assert Great Britain's sphere of influence in the Nile Valley.

Sir Edmund Monson reported to Lord Salisbury, a communication in which M. Delisse, French foreign minister, announced that Marchand had no authority to decide on questions of right, and had been instructed to abstain from any action likely to lead to local conflict. M. Delisse further expressed a conviction that the matter was susceptible of arrangement by means of discussion.

To this Lord Salisbury replied, on Sept. 9, that Great Britain regarded the operations of the sirdar, General Kitchener, as placing all the territories of Khalifa Abdullah by right of conquest in the hands of the British and Egyptian Governments, and insisted that this contention

ADMITTED OF NO DISCUSSION.

Then follow various dispatches, recording the discussions between Sir Edmund Monson and M. Delisse, the latter explaining that Marchand was now virtually a lieutenant to the Loitard expedition, and that therefore the situation at Fashoda, even if Marchand were there, could not be dangerous, as Sir Edmund Monson had represented.

On Sept. 15—still following the blue book—the sirdar reported the dispatch of his expedition to Fashoda, fully confirming the announcements already cabled to the Associated Press, including the fact that Gen. Kitchener's arrival there prevented a second dervish attack on Marchand. The French officer notified the sirdar that he had concluded a treaty, which he had sent to France for ratification, whereby the Shillocks had placed themselves under French care.

MARCHAND ORDERED TO OCCUPY FASHODA.

Marchand replied in the negative to Gen. Kitchener's question whether he was prepared to resist the hoisting of the Egyptian flag, but he maintained that he had orders from the French Government to occupy Fashoda. On the departure of the British forces Gen. Kitchener notified Major Marchand, in writing, that all transportation of war material on the Nile was absolutely prohibited.

The sirdar concludes: "The chief Shillocks came to our camp and positively denied that they had concluded any treaty with Marchand, while all the Shillocks declared their allegiance to the British Government. Moreover, Marchand was in such a precarious position that nothing could have prevented his annihilation by the dervishes had we been a fortnight later in crushing the khalifa."

BRITAIN'S STAND.

Other dispatches indicate that M. Delisse declined Great Britain's request for the immediate withdrawal of Lieut. Marchand, and that Great Britain agreed to dispatch a message for the French Government as a matter of courtesy, without accepting any responsibility for the results it might entail, and still maintaining that the matter admitted of no compromise.

In the final dispatch appearing in the blue book, Lord Salisbury, under date of Oct. 3, instructs Sir Edmund Monson to inform M. Delisse that the latter's message to Major Marchand has been sent, but that Great Britain views the Marchand mission as having no special significance whatever.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENT.

London, Oct. 10.—All the morning papers applaud Lord Salisbury's firmness in the Fashoda question, and the fact that he has approved all the doings of Gen. Kitchener.

The Times says: "While not despairing of an amicable settlement, we cannot but think the situation extremely grave. Lord Salisbury has taken up a position from which retreat is impossible after the publication of the blue book."

The Daily Chronicle thinks the situation only "grave on paper, and not in reality."

The Daily News says: "We hope Lord Salisbury will be able to provide a golden bridge for M. Delcasse."

SENSATIONAL STORIES DENIED.

Cairo, Oct. 10.—The report that the treasury of the khalifa, valued at £10,000,000, had been found and was being sent to Cairo, is without foundation. Equally groundless is the report that Gen. Kitchener will resign the sirdarship.

DELAGOA BAY NEGOTIATIONS DEFERRED.

London, Oct. 10.—A dispatch from Lisbon says the Delagoa Bay negotiations have been deferred until 1899, owing to the United States insisting upon Portugal's observance of the agreement that neither the railroad, the harbor nor the public lands at Lorenzo Marquez be alienated until the Berne award is completed. The estate of the late Col. McMurdo, an American, is involved in the settlement of the Delagoa Bay dispute.

She finally discovered a way to recovery by purchasing a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. MADIE BROWN THE PEG-LEG

Arrested at North Yakima, Wash., and Tricked Into Canada.

Is in Charge of Detective Nickle and Will in All Probability Reach Here on Friday Night and Be Locked Up on the Charge of Murdering P. C. Toohey.

Madie Brown, the alleged murderer of the late P. C. Michael Toohey, will soon be safe behind the bars of London jail. Detective Nickle has been away for over a week, but his whereabouts have been kept a secret by the police authorities. Brown left Victoria, B. C., last night at 9 o'clock, in custody of Detective Nickle, and one of the Ontario provincial police, and if they come direct by the C. P. R. the trio will reach here on Friday at 8 p.m. The following special dispatch, was received this morning:

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 10.—Marion Brown, alias Thomas Allen, the crippled mulatto outlaw of Ontario, who has been in the toils of the police went east by the C. P. R. last night to answer for the wanton killing of Police Constable Michael Toohey, at London, on the 24th of June last. The crime was one of the most cold-blooded and deliberate nature, and the Ontario detectives have consequently exerted every energy to bring the assassin to justice. Step by step brown was traced all the way across the continent to North Yakima, Wash., where Detective Nickle identified him from a photo and description. The identity was confirmed and an Ontario officer was immediately sent west.

TRICKED INTO CANADA.

The arrest was made at Yakima, and from there Brown was taken to Seattle, while extradition proceedings were initiated. These are always vexatiously slow, and the eastern detective knew a better trick by far. Liquor and morphine were smuggled into Brown's cell, and then he was taken out of the Seattle jail under the firm belief that his liberators were friends. From Seattle he was got to Port Angeles, and from that port the alleged colored killer was brought here by the steamer Garland yesterday. As soon as the boat touched Canadian soil the arrest was made by Constables Redgrove and Anderson.

PUT UP A HARD FIGHT.

Although Brown has only one leg, he is prodigiously strong, and fought furiously when he realized that he had been trapped.

The shooting for which Brown must answer to the law was committed while the murdered officer was endeavoring to make an arrest for assaulting a Grand Trunk crossing watchman. The negro, it is alleged, was then chief of a party of tramps, and had been in Ontario but a few hours, and never before in London.

In Texas he is reported to have a record of four killings and several jail breakings. His lawless career was cut short through the vigilance of United States Marshal A. L. Dilley, of Yakima, who made the original arrest, and will receive the $500 reward if Brown is convicted.
