DELMAS CONCLUDES DRAMATIC APPEAL

In Peroration Falls Back Up on the "Unwritten Law."

PICTURES THAW AS A HERO

Toronto, April 9.—One more day, and the concluding chapters of the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White will have been written into history.

With an oratorical appeal to both the written and the unwritten law, for the justification of his client, Delmas, M. Delmas, the California attorney, concluded his exhaustive summing up address to the jury this afternoon.

When court convenes tomorrow at 11:30 o'clock—one hour later than usual—District Attorney Jerome will go before the jury and in a three or four hour address is expected to make a plea which will be accounted one of the best efforts of his life.

Justice Fitzgerald would not say today whether or not he would charge the jury directly following the testimony of the expert witnesses, but he said that he would reserve the right to do so.

With the exception of the moments when he was reading from testimony, Mr. Delmas' speech today was one of sustained oratorical effort. He threw about the form of Harry Thaw the cloak of chivalrous knightdom. Bitterly the attorney again assailed Stanford White. But briefly he discussed the testimony of the expert witnesses, declaring that whatever wrong was on the part of the defendant, he declared the burden of proof as to Thaw's sanity at the time of the homicide rested with the prosecution, which had failed to make out its case.

Thaw seemed tonight to be in the best of spirits, and declared to his lawyers in the Tombs that he felt his case was won. He seemed to have no dread of the assault of the district attorney tomorrow. There was a report today that Mr. Jerome was ill, but he appeared at his office during the afternoon, and said he had been busy for two days preparing his argument.

In view of the district attorney's remarks before the lunacy commission that Thaw is today hopelessly insane, much interest attaches to the line of argument he will pursue in asking for the man's conviction.

"Thaw then turned, walked slowly and quietly toward White, faced him and when he had faced him fired three shots, which caused his death."

"Then he slowly and deliberately, as testified by Meyer Cohen, turned to the audience spread out his arms in the shape of a cross and stood composedly there, a circumstance which denotes the character of the execution that took place."

Mr. Delmas said Thaw stood as a priest might have done after some sacrificial offering, saying "all is over."

Delmas Goes Too Far.

"If Harry Thaw believed he was the instrument of Providence, who will say he was mistaken?"

"What was the condition of Thaw's mind at this time? Men, judge your fellow-man as ye would be judged, and in order to judge him rightly place yourself in the spot where he stood and surround yourselves with the circumstances which surround him."

"Do this and you will be able to do him the justice that you promised that you would do him."

Mr. Delmas then repeated the testimony of these lay witnesses who testified that in their opinion Thaw was irrational in appearance immediately after the tragedy. He also referred to the testimony of Dr. Bingham who saw Thaw in August, and who testified that Thaw then appeared to have delusions.

Mr. Delmas quoted Mr. Jerome's promise to call Dr. Hamilton as a witness.

"We will suppose," he said, "that the dearest being on earth to you may be the beautiful daughter who graces your home like a sunbeam, or the lovely wife walking down the valley of life at your side, in the imminent danger of that death. The physician at the bedside tells you there is an equal chance between life and death."

"Then we will suppose that an urn is set down before you containing ninety-nine white balls and one black ball. You are told to place your hand within the urn, and that if you draw the black ball your beloved one will surely live, but if you draw one of the white balls she will die. Would you draw? No, gentlemen; you would say, the chances as nature has them are equal; it is not for me to interfere or take such a petulant chance. Do not take the chance of doing wrong in this instance."

"I ask you in the name of the law which I invoke; I ask you in the name of humanity; I ask you in the name of religion, to dissolve whatever doubt you may have in favor of this defendant."

This is a matter which requires evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Gentlemen, take your minds back to the day you were examined, when the learned justice said to you, 'Are you ready to give this defendant the benefit of every reasonable doubt?' and on your oath that you were, you were admitted to the jury box.

"Before you send this young man to his doom you must be satisfied of his guilt beyond every reasonable doubt."

The Reasonable Doubt.

"What is a reasonable doubt? The term seems to define itself in its own words. A reasonable doubt is a doubt which a reasonable man may have. You are all reasonable men, and when ever you doubt, you can say that it is a reasonable doubt, the benefit of which law says you must give to the defendant. A great English judge once said that it is better that ninety-nine guilty men should escape than that one innocent man should be punished. If there is one chance in a hundred that this defendant was of such unsound mind as not to know the nature of his act, then you must give him the benefit of that doubt. If we contend that this defendant was insane it is for the learned district attorney to prove that the defendant was sane at the time of the execution of the tragedy; that he was in full possession of his reason and his mental faculties."

Mr. Delmas said that if the jury would permit he would draw an illustration for them. He said, "that the dearest being on earth to you may be the beautiful daughter who graces your home like a sunbeam, or the lovely wife walking down the valley of life at your side, in the imminent danger of that death. The physician at the bedside tells you there is an equal chance between life and death."

"Then we will suppose that an urn is set down before you containing ninety-nine white balls and one black ball. You are told to place your hand within the urn, and that if you draw the black ball your beloved one will surely live, but if you draw one of the white balls she will die. Would you draw? No, gentlemen; you would say, the chances as nature has them are equal; it is not for me to interfere or take such a petulant chance. Do not take the chance of doing wrong in this instance."

"I ask you in the name of the law which I invoke; I ask you in the name of humanity; I ask you in the name of religion, to dissolve whatever doubt you may have in favor of this defendant."

"I now, with all solemnity, leave in your hands the fate of Harry K. Thaw."

Thaw arose from his chair, went to where his mother and wife were sitting, grasped their hands confidently, and then, with head erect, made his way to the prisoners' pen across the "Bridge of Sighs," his prison guard following close behind him.

Thaw believes his case to be won, and freely expressed himself to his counsel.

An adjournment was ordered by Justice Fitzgerald until 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, when District Attorney Jerome, who was not in the courtroom at any stage of today's proceedings, will begin his summing up. The case is expected to be in the jury's hands tomorrow morning.

TORONTO WINS IN FIGHT FOR LIGHT

Legislature Says City Can Exp. appropriate Plant at Fair Price.

Toronto, April 9.—The private bills committee of the Legislature decided unanimously today, after hearing a warm debate, that so far as the principle of expropriation, as applied to the Toronto Electric Light Company, was concerned, it should be conceded to the city.

This point settled, the terms upon which expropriation will be carried out remain to be discussed at a future meeting of the committee, to be held this week.

Hon. J. P. Whitney, Prime Minister, and Mr. George P. Graham, the leader of the Opposition, were united in the opinion that the general principle of expropriation did not concern the power policy for Western Ontario. One of the terms of the bill will be that the ratepayers must first pass on the questions of expropriating the plant, at a price to be fixed by a board of valuers. Then if the company declines to sell out at that price the compulsory expropriation will go into effect.

"Efforts had been made to lug in the power question," said the Premier, "and reference had been made to the English money markets. We have been told that no money for Canadian matters will be obtainable if this bill is passed. I have consulted with some of the leaders of English finance, and I say, 'statement' of he went on, 'that the power of the scare was caused by the men who had resorted to unheard-of efforts to defeat our power policy. It was due to the exaggerated terms in which half-witted men represented or misrepresented that policy across the sea.'"

Mr. J. H. Fryer, of Galt, president of the Western Ontario Municipalities Niagara Power Union, also urged the committee to grant the request in the interests of the municipalities throughout the Province, which are looking for cheap power. He pointed out that the fate of the cheap power movement throughout Ontario depended on the result of the committee's decision, and hoped the committee would not nullify the efforts of the hydro-electric power commission.

"The general question of a power policy for Western Ontario has nothing to do with this application," declared Mr. Whitney. "We have nothing to do with that today. When that bill comes up in the House we will discuss it, but today we are discussing the question of allowing a by-law to be submitted to the people for them to decide whether or not they will purchase the electric light plant. I can see no reason to oppose that. If the city is willing to buy the company's plant at a fair price I cannot see where any objection should be made, and I join with Mr. Whitney in heartily supporting the bill." (Cheers.)

The question was then put to the committee and carried without a dissenting voice.
