Biplane Rises Ten Feet From Surface, But Sudden Wind Drive Cuts Flight Short.

A flight of about 300 yards was made by the aeroplane "Golden Dart" at Scarboro Beach park last night and then she took a dive into the bay carrying her driver, C. F. Willard, down to nothing worst than a cold dip. Boats were soon sent out to the rescue and Willard was taken ashore. The machine was sufficiently buoyant to keep partly above water, and was easny towed in and hauled back to the tent. The machine was slightly damaged, a few ribs were broken, and the proper-ler wrecked, but not beyond repair. It was nearly dark when Willard took his seat on the biplane at 7.25 o'clock and prepared for the trial. Ever since Monday the aviator had been patiently waiting for the wind to orop and last evening when the breeze lessened somewhat Willard determined to attempt a flight.
