in her own defence at the afterno session. She walked steadily and ra-pidly to the stand. Her manner was ene of cool indifference, and ever novement of her hands and the muscles of her face gave sign of absolute resignation. She spoke quietly at first in modulated tones, which rose slightly which Justice Latchford complained that he could not hear her.

that he could not hear her.
Then, led by Mr. Merecith, she began the story. Harvey Scott had come to her house in the early morning, about 7 o'clock, as far as she could remember. He seemed to be in one of his regular cutbursts of temper. There was but one door to the house, and he was there, standing talking to end he was there, standing talking to the defenceless woman, with a huge stick in his hand, which he waved tostick in his hand, which he waved to-vards her as he emphasized his dis-pleasure that some gate had been left open. He branchished it around her head, until she drew back, in absolute

What did you do then?" asked Mr.

"I let the revolver off."

Previous Threats.

Once, she said, he had struck her with a piece of fencing and swelled her arm for months; another time he charged with assault before a magis-trate. "He was fined, and took it out time the magistrate said he paid a little money to the church, and that it would not do to fine him," she said.

Mr. Meredith asked if the had ever seen him with a cun hefere. The well seen him with a gun before. The wit-ress said: "At one time he came to the house, and I cooked thru a keyhole. and he had the point sticking into the woodwork. Some time afterwards, as we were coming home from church lowed shot past the corner of of the shot."

"Did he ever make threats towards "Yes, He threatened to strike m dozens times.

"Did he ever call you names Yes, he called me lunatic, devil and another opprobrious epithets." (
Mr. Meredith for the defence occupled forty minutes in his address to the jury. Mr. Reade took half an hour. Thousands of names have been atached to petitions circulated thruout the country in behalf of Mrs. Scott.

MAIL ORDERS CAREFULLY FILLED.

The World published an item on Tuesday to the effect that a reader had suggested that the name Jarvisstreet be changed to Rhumeilly-street, and offering a prize of one dollar to anyone who would first give the best reason for the change in name.

A lot of answers came to hand. The prize goes to Albert Button, pump-maker, Queen-street, whose answer ran: "Because it is the street of roomers and mealers."
