USE OF IDEAS IS ADVOCATED

National Forum Leader Would Attack Bolshevism and Other Problems
By New Methods
Boston, May 17—"Bolshevism, anarchy and the radical forms of socialism cannot be fought by money, nor by bullets and bayonets, nor by hate and vituperation, but by ideas and especially new ideas," said George W. Coleman, at the head of the national forum movement, in an address to the members of the Massachusetts Press Association on Monday.
"Whenever we see our radical ideas being changed by events," continued Mr. Coleman, "don't you think that you ought to be a little more hospitable when the next new idea walks up and faces us? And the next new one will face us on July 1. It was unlikable a few years ago that this country would become dry in the near future, but when we hear the testimony from states where they have had prohibition, and where the bankers, merchants, and real estate men have become convinced, offenses against their will, then we begin to think that this thing which was unimaginable a few years ago is the real thing.
"Another new idea is the approaching change in our industrial life. In this respect, the coming generation will be far different from the past. England is 25 years ahead of us in solving industrial problems, but a wonderful awakening is taking place here. We have already seen a complete transformation in the churches on this question. Within five years the business world has begun to wake up to the fact that new ways must be found for meeting these problems.
"And so I feel that, if we are given time, and if we are not crowded too hard by the proletariat below, that there is not the slightest doubt that we shall work out our problems safely."
