Continue to secure your crops as they become ripe; the time in which your grain crop should be cut, is when the straw begins to shrink, and becomes white about half an inch below the ear; but if a blight or rust has affected wheat or rye, it is best to cut it immediately, even if the grain be in a milky state. Attend to your sheep; keep their noses smeared with a mixture of tar and salt, from the 10th of this month to the 20th of September, so as to preserve them from the æstrus ovis, or fly which causes worms in their heads. Destroy thistles, let them grow till in full bloom, then cut them off with a scythe about an inch from the ground, the stem being hollow, the rains and dews descend into the heart of the plant, and it soon dies. Cut your grain crops close to the ground. Fruit-trees may now be budded. Select the ripest and most plump seeds (put them away in a cool dry place, if left in a damp place they are apt to decay,) from such plants as are most forward and thrifty, by adhering to this principle you will, in all probability, improve your vegetables. Attend to the green-house. Propagate plants by cuttings, &c. Dress plants as occasion offers: remove decayed leaves; stir the surface of the earth often; keep them well watered. Potted Plants, continue out doors until the end of the month.
