AN INTERESTING TRIP.

C. B. Foster Tell of the Canadian West and St. John People He Saw Out There.

C. B. Foster, district passenger agent of the C. P. R., who has been on an extensive tour of the west, arrived in the city Saturday on the noon train, and went at once to his residence at Rossessy.

A Star reporter found Mr. Foster at his desk this morning up to his eyes in work, but looking the picture of health after his thirty-six day trip from ocean to ocean and over prairie and mountain, and saying nothing of a visit to the Pike.

In his thirty-six days' absence from the city Mr. Foster travelled 10,000 miles, and says that the one thing that impressed itself upon him more than anything else was the impensity of the country, particularly the mountains. He stopped a day at Winnipeg. The boom there is a wonder. Last year the city's population increased 10,000, and this year they expect 20,000 more. Traveling along the prairies Mr. Foster says that every little distance a new station that was not on the map last year, is to be seen. Near by will be a few shacks, a general store, a sawmill, and agricultural machinery depot, while dotted here and there are numerous towns.

At Calgary Mr. Foster met a rancher who had disposed of his property in Washington State, U. S. A., and with his stock and machinery moved to Canada. He was given $30,000 for his Washington lands. Ranchers are rushing into the country from all sides.

Vancouver and Victoria Mr. Foster considers wonderful cities with magnificent climates. Victoria, to his mind, is more English than Halifax. There he met "Sandy" Baxter, Mrs. I. E. Cornwall and her son, Edward, George Taylor, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch, and Joseph N. Ellis. The latter, Mr. Foster says, is to be married very shortly.

Mr. Foster then went down Puget Sound to Seattle and Tacoma, and from there to San Francisco by rail, returning to Vancouver. The Kootenay district was next visited, and he spent a day at Nelson. On his way west Mr. Foster visited Chicago, St. Paul and St. Louis. Here he met A. H. Lindsay, who is with the C. E. exhibit, and F. G. Spencer, who had just recovered from a peek of trouble. It seems that Spencer struck the fair stick in the morning with his pockets sticking out with money, all Canadian bills. He was hungry and knew that his money was no good. For hours he wandered about trying to get mad money for good, but it was not till the banks and exchange offices opened that he could satisfy the inner man.

Mr. Foster concluded his trip with a visit to Detroit and Montreal.
