TAKE MOOSE IN ACTION.

Dr. Heber Bishop Gets Moving Pictures of Big Game.

Dr. Heber Bishop has the distinction of having secured the only moving pictures of big game ever taken. These were secured as the result of a suggestion of the fish and game commission, and the work of securing the pictures took several weeks in the woods of Maine and New Brunswick. There were many failures in the task of taking pictures of moose being particularly difficult at the early morning, so that the question of light had to be taken into consideration.

One of the most interesting of the moving pictures taken by Dr. Bishop's party and now being shown at Boston Theatre, is most exciting struggle with a salmon which weighed 56 pounds and took five hours and 28 minutes to land.

DEATH FOLLOWS BURNS ON LITTLE BOY'S BODY

George Quinn, the three-year-old son of James Quinn, a North End fish dealer, died last night at eight o'clock as the result of burns received early yesterday morning.

The little fellow slept with his sister, who is a year or two older, and shortly after seven o'clock yesterday morning they both awoke. George crawled out of his bed in his nightdress and in some unknown manner secured some matches with which he started to play. Suddenly his little sister was startled by a cry and upon looking at George found his nightgown on fire. The youngster was soon enveloped in flames. In this condition he ran screaming to his parents' room, where they were asleep. The cries of both his sister, who was frantic with fear, and the boy himself awoke the father and mother, who jumped from their bed and immediately extinguished the flame with a quilt. The entire nightgown and little undershirt had been burned, and there was hardly a spot on the boy's body which escaped being severely burned. His hands and arms, legs and thighs were covered with large, painful burns, which caused the little fellow to scream with pain.
