Samuel ix: 1: "And David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's debts? Have you no Jonathan stand-Mr. Shannon said: sake?"

Yes; there is at least one left of the house of Saul. His name is Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the grandson of a fallen king. Perhaps history does not contain a more pathetic story than that of Mephibosheth. He was but a baby when his father and grand- and if for one moment these eyes of flesh father were slain in the battle of Gil-But losing Saul and Jonathan boa. was by no means the greatest loss sustained by the baby Mephibosheth. But no one knows that Mephibosheth "was lame on both better than you do the anxieties, the his feet.'

So I need not tarry in an effort to have accompanied your rise. Who was create sympathy for Jonathan's only it that gave you you first upward push, son. Of course there have been eras strengthened you by trusting you, and in history when these unfortunates so set your face toward the shining were considered a burden to society, mount of success? Perhaps he passed and the doctrine of extermination was from earth long ago. His sun may not only preached, but practiced. trait of Alexander of Macedon, the king rested his face in his hand, as if he were in deep study, but he was simply trying to hide an ugly scar. The Son of God is not ashamed of our scars, nor of our lame feet, nor of our dim vision, nor of our soiled garments. Calvary's blood washes out every scar, imparts new life to every crippled soul, removes the darkness from blinded eyes, and whitens the garments of the heart into snowlike purity! Finally, I should be unfaithful to this history if I left the impression that Mepibosheth came to David's palace as a mere visitor. David's kindness towers into its highest possible beau ty when he declares. "Menhibosheth shall eat at my table as one of the king's sons." our religion-that every human being may be as one of the King's sons. But you say, "Is it not possible for you to be mistaken?" Oh, no, I am not mis taken. I may be mistaken in the beauty of morn, the glory of night, the song of birds, the gold of autumn; I may be mistaken in the glowing prophecies of hope, the sacred dreams of youth, the treasured memories of
