An event of pleasure to a number of the little folk of the town, took place on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. H. W. Murray was hostess at a children's party in honor of the 9th birthday anniversary of her little daughter, Margaret. Owing to wet weather the children were not entertained on the lawn, as was the original intention, but the little guests made merry within doors and the event was heartily enjoyed by all present. After tea was served, various games were played, the crowning feature being the "Jacky Horner Pie," from which by the pulling of a number of streamers, each little boy and girl received a pretty souvenir of the occasion.

The birthday cake did not have the usual adornment of candles, the latter being substituted by 9 small Union Jacks. The hostess had as aides Miss Muriel McQueen, Miss Elizabeth Blair, and Miss Jessie Macdougall. The little guest of honor was the recipient of very pretty birthday gifts.

Wearing his military uniform, he rode through the town with a half company of Turkish troops, compelling the raging mob to stop the killing, and posting guards over particular houses. His right arm was broken by a bullet, but this did not prevent him from riding out again, and in the second and worst outbreak of massacre against saving more hundreds of lives. The British Ambassador at the Porte afforded him a generous meed of support and encouragement, and Major Doughty-Wylie's services were recognized by the award of the C. M. G. He also received the warm thanks of many foreign governments and public bodies. He afterwards organized a system of relief to the destitute—22,000 persons.
