Toward midnight they went to their rooms. The extraordinary events of the day had kept them from talking about BRISTOL'S Captain Draper, though the subject had been for days uppermost in both ninds.
When Mr. Wyville entered his room his eyes fell on a letter, fixed endwise on his table to attract his attention. It was addressed to him. He opened it, and

On the back of it were written the ords, in Mr. Haggett's handwritin

"This is the only photograph of the man known as Moondyne. It was taken in Western Australia, just before his latest escape from Fremantle Prison. All other photographs of this prisoner have unaccountably disappeared from the prison books." Mr. Wyville gazed a long time at the

It was the sudden touch of this fear that made Sheridan walk so quickly to his room on the night of the recognition. It came like a flash; and he deemed it Without a word, Mr. Wyville put out his hand, which Haggett grimly seized.

"Thank you," said Mr. Wyville.

"That's not right," said Haggett; "you have saved all our lives."

Mr. Wyville negatively shook his head, with his usual grave smile; and was about to pass on. Mr. Haggett slowly let go his hand, still looking at him with the same strange expression. They had same strange expression. They had parted a few paces, when Haggett strode after Mr. Wyville with a new impulse, seized his hand once more in a grip of ron, and met his eye with a face working in strong emotion, every possible reef in his immense lips quivering with sup ressed feeling.

"Forgive me!" he said; and without

Mr. Wyville gazed a long time at the strange present. Then he laid it on the table, locked his door, and walked meditatively to and fro his narrow room. At times he would stop and take the picture from the table, look at it with deep attention, while his lips moved as if he were addressing it.

At last he took the portrait, tore it to pieces, and, opening the window of his room, threw the pieces into the sea.

That night, when the excitement had died, and the usual quiet had been restored, Mr. Wyville and Sheridau walk-

"But, Mr. Sheridan," said the nut, thinking of Alice's health, (the much thinking of Alice's health).

"But, Mr. Sheridan," said the nun, thinking of Alice's health, "she must come into the open air some time."

"It were better not—better not," answered Sheridan in a troubled mind; "it were better that she should remain all day in the hospital."

"In the hospital!" repeated the wise little nun, with a pitying smile. She evidently saw, more clearly than any one on board, the strange complications around her. The hearts of at least four of the principal actors in the sorrowful

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy. Scrofula, which produced a painful infammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparila. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—

Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—

C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflamma-

I suffered for a year with infinuma-tion in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, deptiving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, By Taking three bottles of this medicine, have entirely cured. My sight has be stored, and there is no sign of infi tion, sore, or ulcer in my eye.— T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio. T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permauent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light wifthout pain. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.
