

Conclusion:

Already B. of C. has made its presence felt in life of the nation and is quickly acquiring the prestige, both in Canada and elsewhere, which such an institution should enjoy;

New building, of which this stone will form so distinctive a part, will assume a foremost place among the fine edifices which are making Ottawa a beautiful Capital of which all Canadians may be proud, just as the Bank itself is rapidly assuming a place of first importance in the financial and commercial life of the nation.
