

tures demonstrating the necessity of connection between unconnectibles, and the connection of necessity between pedantry and imbecility, with other important and interesting researches relative to the animal, mental, and other economies. Amongst others, Scotch economy will not be forgotten; in exemplification whereof he adduces his own practice of never paying for any of his lengthy and unintelligible advertisements.

From Clarence-town* (which has become a place of resort of the highest fashion) intelligence has been received that on the day His Excellency Lord Viceroy arrived there, Lady Viceroy, taking an airing on horseback, was unluckily thrown from her saddle. We are happy to add that no material injury was sustained by her ladyship; but the celebrated Drs. Waggoners being summoned to attend, a preventative remedy against future accidents was immediately prescribed, and the horse was shot without delay, whence it is reasonably concluded he will never again throw his rider. This improved method of practice is intended to be inserted both in the next number of the Medical Repertory, and in the new edition of Geoffry Gambado's Horsemanship.

In one of the warm days of this month, Watty Loverule Esq. in riding out with his mamma, displayed a rich and thick India shawl, which was wound round his neck in the most graceful style, & though seemingly smothered with heat, he most heroically bore it. It is to be lamented that the dominion of the Loyerules has thus been found inadequate to turn summer into winter. Perhaps the failure of the experiment may be attributed to the operator, though a Harlequin, not being a conjuror.

*So called from a Duke of Clarence after whom it was re-christened, having been deprived of its original name, which was derived from the celebrated mistress of Charles the VI. of France.
