Central District Court.

(Before Judge Conroy.) Mayor Ellis vs. James A. McKay. This was an action taken as a result of the refusal by the defendant to pay a demand made by the Municipal Council for the 4 per cent. tax upon the proceeds of the recent hockey matches between the City and the Nova Scotia teams. Defendant acted as one of a number of promoters who got the team here to play games with a local combination. The proceeds of the matches were received by these promoters, and to the Council's demand for the tax defendants alleged that the tax does not apply to them in that they did not enter into the venture for purposes of profit, but for the sake of the sport to the community. Several witnesses were examined on both sides, and at the conclusion of the counsel's argument His Honor intimated that his judgment would be delivered at a later date. After again hearing counsel in the matter, in the course of his remarks the Judge intimated that his position was purely that of interpreting the law, but that he questioned the wisdom of the Council in putting into effect such a tax, even if the Statute permitted them to do so. He regarded the venture as a commendable one, and had no doubt in his mind that the question of gain in its ordinary sense was not considered by the gentlemen who acted as promoters. F. J. Morris, K. C., for plaintiff; W. J. Higgins, B. L., for defendant.

How to Stop Swearing.

When Sir Richard Hawkins' ship, the Deinty, was off the Guinea coast it caught fire and had a narrow escape from destruction. The sequel, as told by John Barnett in "Fighting Admirals," was curious: "The men thanked God for their deliverance and as a mark of gratitude took occasion to banish swearing from the little fleet. By general consent it was ordained that a palmer, or ferrule, should be carried by any one who was taken with an oath; and that he should give the next who swore a stroke with it. At the end of the day he who had the ferrule received three strokes from the captain or the master. Within three days there was no more swearing aboard the ships."

A Million an Hour.

The Government printers who have secured the official contract for the supply of postage stamps for 1911 and onwards have built a new factory for the purpose near London, where they are already turning out stamps at the rate of a million an hour. As they calculate 5,000 working hours to the year, the total number of stamps printed per annum will be 5,000 millions. The stamps are printed on sheets of 240, which sheets in their plain form are worth a penny; when they leave the factory their value is one pound.
