Deceased was a native of Stettin, Germany, and was for many years chief mechanical engineer of the Nfid. Railway and afterwards took charge of the watering arrangements of the Reid-Nfid. Co. He was a most enthusiastic sportsman, both with rod and gun, and offered his assistance in his big hearted way to sportsmen both in following it up. His cheery voice will long be remembered in the great winter game of curling which he used to enjoy to the full. He came to Newfoundland as chief engineer of the S.S. Kite and was also chief engineer of the S.S. was also chief engineer of the S.S Bear in the Greeley Relief Expedition For some time he has been suffering from a disease which could only end fatally, and when told, as he insisted its fatal grasp, he received the news in his characteristic manly fashion He is survived by six sons and one daughter, to whom we extend sincere

The s.s. Stella Maris sank by the side of the dock pier at 8 o'clock this morning. The ship was being coaled for the northern service and as the bunkers were untrimmed, the ship had heavy list. The port holes were left open by mistake, and when the ship gave a sudden lurch she rapidly filled with water and sank to bottom. She is now in an upright position, with the water up to the funnel.
