Give The Railway a Chance

Since the Railway was taken over by the Government it has been regarded by everyone as a white elephant, and without exwhite elephant, and without exception we have all taken a turn in damning it because of its cost, because of its lack of travelling facilities, because it is incapable facilities faciliti particular, because it is Government owned. It is a case of having given a dog a bad name and hanging it forthwith.

It cannot be denied that there has been considerable justification for this attitude of the public, but as we have to take things day morning.
