

Way to Peace in Industry

MEMBERS THREE "WILLS"

Speaking at a meeting in support of the Industrial Welfare Society at the House of Commons recently, attended by M.P.s of all parties, the Labour Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin...

...believes that far more trouble is caused in industry by lack of consideration for the smaller amenities of the part of many employers...

...there is really room for a clearing-up in which all parties may bring their common experience and common knowledge.

...have spoken in the House of Commons and other places about the measures that have come over industry and there is no doubt that, as the result of the efforts of the Government...

...to get the growth of powerful organizations both of masters and men, which were unknown to the generations that preceded us. When you get such organizations you must get the human nature being what it is...

...the result is that too often industrial relations in certain industries are kept in a state approaching that of war.

...is all wrong. We find that sometimes where apology is made for the wrong taken, it is pleaded that the real reason is loyalty to their tradition, whichever it might be.

...Example to Employers.

...The Industrial Welfare Society is desiring co-operation in industry, and we want to teach the employing class that those who have to employ men should tackle the matter in the spirit of a profession, and not a professional pride ought to be developed.

...The lesson has not been learned, there are some notable exceptions, and we want the example of the best spread until it has been followed through industry.

...do not mean for a moment that they should look, either from one side or the other, on industry as a philanthropic enterprise. I mean something deeper than that.

...All people engaged in industry must realize that men are men and should be treated as ends rather than as means. The essential thing is respect for human personality. That is one of the main roads through the industrial maze.

...People often ask me, "It is all very well talking, but what are you going to do?"

...People who say that are relying on machinery and on legislation—two things perfectly false. The only thing we can rely on is the human will, and when you have the human will properly directed, then you will begin to see things.

...On these three things you can build a better world than you desire—the will to do the will to co-operate, and the will to work. (Cheers.)
