DEATH BY SLOW POISON

Body of a Dead and Wealthy Recluse To Be Exhumed.

New York, Feb. 19. - The American says: The authorities are investigating the death of Maria Corsa, the recluse, who died last Tuesday in her home, in which, later, money and deeds amounting to thousands of dollars in value. were found. It was thought at first she was a victim of starvation, but circumstances have arisen that have caused the district attorney's office and Coroner Schwanneke, of the Bronx, to suspect that other than natural causes contributed to her death. District Attorney Jerome yesterday received a note charging that her death was due to the effects of a slow poison. The name of a man suspected. and that of the chemist alleged to have
