

EDINBURGH CAMP BANQUETS GUESTS

St. Thomas Daughters of Scotland Are Entertained by London Lodge.

One of the biggest gatherings of the year for Edinburgh Castle camp, Daughters of Scotland, was held last night, when the local camp entertained about sixty members of Stirling Castle camp, St. Thomas, who motored over for the event.

Among the distinguished persons present were Past Chief Jack Mason and Past Chief W. Cunningham, who took charge of the initiation service, during which four new members were taken into Edinburgh Castle camp. Mrs. May Haldane, chief officer, presided.

Over one hundred sat down to supper arranged by Mrs. Jack Mason and Mrs. Alex. Munro, following which the evening was spent in dancing.

The lodge is arranging to hold monthly concerts for the men at Byron sanatorium, following the custom of last year.

Mrs. George Stark and Mrs. James Smith have been appointed conversers for the first concert. The lodge is also planning a Halloween dance to be held in Hyman hall on Oct. 31, with Mrs. Alex. Munro as convenor.

TRINITY CHAPTER PLANS ITS ANNUAL RECEPTION

Members Will Entertain Grand Worthy Matron on Evening of November 20.

In her honor, a dinner will be given at the Smallman and Ingram tearoom. Other guests of honor on this occasion will be the local grand chapter officers, chapter meeting will be held with the exemplification of the degrees an important part.

Trinity chapter has arranged to hold its annual "at home" on Nov. 7, the event taking the form of a Halloween party. Mrs. O. L. Cunningham and Mrs. Claude White are the conveners.

WOMEN and THE HOME

POLITENESS IN OTHERS MAY BE INSPIRED—JULIA HOYT

Children Should Not Be Taught Suspicion of Behavior of Others.

EXPECT RESPECT

By JULIA HOYT.

In a recent article I said that in my opinion one generally receives what one expects. Isn't it true that if you look at someone with the expectancy of impertinence or rudeness in your eyes the idea may be put in the head of the person addressed. It is also true that many have been taken aback and deterred from their originally intended behavior by meeting the expectancy of something totally different. It sounds rather sentimental, yet I believe that many have been inspired to do the nice thing by coming in contact with someone who takes it for granted that they are going to be nice.

Why are most people straight and kindly with children? Not because they of necessity love children, not because they particularly care what happens to them. It is because the implicit confidence of the child in their goodness and kindness inspires in them a self-respect, a desire to prove that the child is not wrong in its confidence, a desire, in other words, to live up to that unexpressed belief in them.

Inspire What You Want.

Very much of the same thing can occur between adults. Expect politeness, consideration or respect from someone, who, as a rule, meets with suspicion and defensiveness and you will very often surprise and inspire them into giving you the thing which you expect.

Don't form quick conclusions of people from their superficial and outward appearance. "A good slogan, I do not generally do this, but I had a rather amusing example some weeks ago of how mistaken one can be when one does it. I picked up a taxi in the middle of the afternoon, and as I looked at the chauffeur, I said to myself, "Well, if I were taking this man late at night I might feel a little nervous." His outward appearance was certainly that of one of the thugs one reads about.

On the way down to my house, however, I got into conversation with him and very soon he was telling me in detail about his wife and two little boys and his many extremely sensible ideas on the bringing-up of children.

Appearances Deceitful.

He was one of the nicest men I had met in a long time and it brought home to me again the absurdity of forming superficial opinion. Here was a man who through being unshaven, wearing no collar, etc., undoubtedly looked the part of a thug; instead, he was a home-loving, intelligent and kindly father.

I think that sometimes parents make a mistake in bringing up their children to be suspicious of the intentions and probable behavior of others towards them. We are bound to have disappointments, no matter what our attitude may be, but nothing can convince me that confidence in a person's better self will not, in the long run, gain more than an expectation of bad things and the so-called "chip on the shoulder" in one's attitude.
