What New Ontario Wants.

We are hearing a good deal about New Ontario these days, and it is now becoming better known than it used to be that north and west of Toronto, but still within the Provincial limits, there exists a new territory of great extent, containing enormous wealth in the shape of ores of iron and other metals. The name Ontario is also material for making a claim on an unlimited amount, and might do something considerable in the production, even were there no coal to be had. Still, it seems to be a prevailing belief that were coal to be obtained "hands," it would be worth the cost of the development of iron-ore in this great country of iron. For this reason we look for two things—namely, we attend the Dominion Government's movement towards reciprocity in lumber and other commodities, but we are included in the bargain. And, as we have before remarked, this result is not so unlikely as some people may imagine. The people of the New England States are anxious to get New Scotia coal free, in order to revive some important iron industries which used to flourish down there, but which have since the border. Some years ago, when Sir Leonard Tilley was Minister of Finance, he visited Ontario and proposed this very thing. The Minister informed the Government to agree to partial reciprocity, but advised that the scope of the arrangement be made larger. To which the Minister replied that this reciprocity was with coal and iron only, and that they were not prepared to discuss reciprocity in any other commodities. Well, we may observe that some progress has been made since that time, but coal and iron are now on both sides, and it need not surprise us very much were a way found to make soft coal free also. The proposal would be powerfully supported throughout the Dominion, in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and to a considerable extent in Pennsylvania too. We quite believe that the rumors lately current as to the Dominion Government's having made a formal proposal for free lumber are founded on fact, and we hope soon to hear that soft coal has been added to the proposal, in which case the chances of its being finally adopted would be greatly increased.

When coal and iron are situated far apart from each other the ideal arrangement for bringing them together is about as follows: Reciprocity in lumber and iron, and a transportation service, whether by land or by water, or both, as circumstances may dictate. The vessels, or cars, would carry full loads of coal one way and full loads of iron the other way. This would realize the seu plus ultra of cheap transportation for the freight carrier, and would be a most desirable and rapid transit. We were tried on a large scale it would be a big lift for New Ontario.

Perhaps there may be free trade snappers, as we may call them, who will charge that in proposing that soft coal as well as iron be made free, the World is falling away from its professed Protectionist principles.

The prospect, however, does not much alarm us. Some time after this, should the matter seem likely to materialize, we may show that our position is and has been consistent all through; but meantime let us wait a little.

A Standing Army and an Army of Farmers. The German army, says Mr. Barling-Gould in his interesting work upon the great modern empire, "is a crushing force on the country."

And it goes on to speak of the enormous sum of money that has been expended for the military expenses of the empire. The German army on a peace footing comprises 445,000 officers and men, but there is an organized reserve army of 1,000,000 men, and it is expected to be about 1,100,000, so that the United States pension list also, which costs about $20,000,000 a year—much more than that of Germany.

When the Bulgarian Government made inquiries the other day as to the arming of 30,000 Serbian Reservists, the answer was that it was to go down brigandage. Mr. Macdonald, the Serbian Home Secretary, now declares that he has no objection as large in the country. It is no wonder then that the further question should be asked: "Do you need 30,000 extra troops to put down 34 brigades?" The prefect that the Bulgarian authorities are not satisfied with the explanations from Belgrade respecting the arming of the Reservists is to be found in the fact that there has recently been a meeting of troops in the neighborhood of Sofia. The latest news is that the detached forces around the Bulgarian capital are all being armed with heavy Krupp guns.

THE CORRESPONDENT'S INQUIRY.

A Batch of Letters Sent Sunday. Taking the Bull by the Horns. Toronto World: Into the media at the Sunday afternoon session a good many people have followed. The World's columns shedding any new light on the subject or chronicle anything beyond their individual opinions. It is, however, for the purpose of the Toronto World, to take the bull by the horns and hold him with its following sentences of admiration and vigorous words.
