MENTOR. St. Andrews, Feb. 1, 1833. () The following remarks on the extraordinary winter thus far, we extract from the PLiladelphia Sentinel of yesterday morning. "WHAT AN EXTRAORDINIARY WINTER !"-Fifty times a day do we hear this remark mede; and the frequency with which it is called forth is a most unanswerable proof that it is indeed an extraordinary winter.

It is indeed an extraordinary winter. We are not indicting these remarks for our present readers, but 'or those who shall, some ten, fifteen, twenty, thirty, fifty or sixty years hence, refer to "THE EXTRAORDINARY wARM WINTER. Those who are living at that day when the hand that now writes this is day, when the hand that now writes this is mouldered to dust, will, it their eye happens to fill upon this paragraph, as they turn over an old dusty, worm caten file of newspa-pers which belonged to their grand parents, read with asionish ment that during the whole Brig. month of December, 1837, and up to the 19th of small fire in our stove, which is required by the dampness of the atmosphere, obliged us to throw open our window and door ! This extraordinary mildness of temperature seems to be a benevolent isterposition of Providence in behalf of the poor, who, had the season been such an one as we usually have, must have suffered very much, depriv-ed of employment as they had been to a con-Ship siderable extent for nearly the whole past year Bqe." and unprepared as they consequently were for the rigors of winter.
