THE COLDEN CROSS OR SEE HOW THESE CHRISTIANS LOVE ONE ANOTHER

A few Sundays ugo I was on my way to the Sunday school, when my attention was attracted by a trivillar who, in his following joint my was passing through the crowd of children outside the school gates. His appearance was sufficiently traking. He was meanly and taragrely challing long, love, faded garment. hoveve was occup and dark, his features rights in word with the southern Italian son, to which country he apparently belonged. I often think he court have been one of the band of exites. who having escaped from the tyranny of their country, seek safety and repose in our rand But as his tall, gaunt figure stalked along, covered with dust, he was just such a one as imm dutely attracts the attention and (I grieve to say) excites the radicule of our Fing lish children. My mind misgave me on this subject, as he approached my forgetful but well monning charges, and, alas! I was not disap polated Twenty little fingers were at once pointed in derision, and as many (if not more) little tongues called out some unfcoling mekname or other. The traveller for an instant con fronted tim, and drew himself up to his full height, he surveyed them for a moment, and then turned to pass on. As he now faced me I noticed his eye dilate and his features to come darker with a burning indignation - Sud dealy he observed me approaching with my arm uplifted to catch the children's attention, and to check their ruleness. He instantly per ceived I was their clergyman, and in my prosence he thus rebuked us. Thrusting his hand into his bosoin he drive from thence a golden Cross, attached to a sort of watch guard, he stood, raised his eyes to heaven, and in a few hurried, impassioned words, called God to wit ness that he was a Christnin, and to mark how his fellow Christains received him -

"Are these Christians, and is this the way they treat another ? Am I a heathen, that thus I should be pointed at and mocked as unbeliever ? I, too, am a Christain, and in remembrance of Him who died upon the Cross, I kiss the symbol of my Christain profession."

And he raised the Cross to his lips, and fervently kissed it I advanced to the poor man and bugged him not to feel burt at the rude treatment he had experienced, I hope he understood what I said-for he passed on, and we shall see each other no more. I, too, passed on, and, along with the children, entered the schoolroom. I have said the man rebuked us, for although the incident seemed lost upon the children at the time, I myself, as their teacher, felt rebuked, and determined, if possible, that they should experience somewhat of my feel ing. After prayers, silence was procialmed and taking for my subject our Saviour's words, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another," and for the application, the practice of the early Christians, which osused mon to say, "See how these Ulristains love one another, 'I explained the poor man's conduct to the children Whenever, therefore, we see any one whose appearance would create a smile, it is remember that perhaps, this doubted comments assets in the bases also "guiden Cross," and by pulling it forth and showing it to us, may even our laughter into shame. And, surely, if many do not carry In what terms did Johovah announce himself about with them a visible aymbol, yet almost to Mon - and how was he thereby a feeted I all carry on their foreheads the Cross on their forebeads that ross of their Christian profession, which, rest assured, trod sees, although we cannot. And, above all, every one carries in the inmost soul the mark of redemption by the Cross of Christ Let us, then, so far from mocking the poor way farer-so safe, perhs s, in the Ottawa, June 19, 1802. celestial road-try to lighten his journey, and at the last day, those whom we have treated
