

PART XI.

This Part deals with aid of the civil power in cases of riot or disturbance of the peace. The liability upon the army, and in a supplemental capacity the air force, for aid in these cases has long been established by the Militia Act and The Royal Canadian Air Force Act. A liability similar to that imposed on the air force will by this Part be imposed on the navy. Aid to the civil power has been, and under the provisions of this Part would still be, primarily an army responsibility and the services of the navy and air force would be supplemental only.
