Captain F.A.Cavenagh's candidature for the Professorship of Education has our most cordial support. He was one of the first and is, to say the least, one of the most brilliant men who have passed through our secondary department; and the powers which we recognised in the young graduate have developed into the ripe ability of one who is, in the best sense of the phrase, a cultivated man of the world. He is a scholar without a grain of pedantry, a teacher without any of the teacher's limitations of horizon. He has a wide practical acquaintance with educational problems, and brings to their study, together with the broadest sympathy, a singularly well-balanced and critical judgment. He has a thorough understanding of the outlook and needs of young teachers, and has shown himself equally capable of gaining the respect and confidence of their seniors. A department under his control would be conducted efficiently, with dignity and without friction; for he is quick to discern ability of all kinds, and has an admirable gift of collaboration.

In short, there are few men whom we could recommend with equal confidence for the Chair in Education in the
