

demand legislation as a right, and they are on the spot to protect. No practical and useful movement in game legislation of direct benefit to the farmer can be expected from any representative body until pressure is put upon them. The modern legislator follows public opinion. He no longer leads. The Farmer, if he wants legislation, must make the local representative understand that it is required.

23 Toronto St.,
Toronto.
