olenty of ound on

m shore, or seven nich now anced up an excelne tide set could not hove the ending to nich there ty people; pip, all of , or some d so anxiommodiarrels and e priority essel, and be ferved infive: that of toes to rought us, en in bargerly deand ten beaver beaver skins were purchased of these people in less than forty minutes. So flourishing a trade we had never before experienced.

At three we made fail, and stood out of the bay. In the morning of the 3d, several canoes approached us; but finding the Indians who were aboard them, were some of those we had dealt with the preceding day, and knowing that they had nothing worth purchasing, we gave up the thoughts of getting into our proposed harbour; thinking it probable we might procure fresh supplies of furs to the eastward. At three o'clock we stretched to the south-west.

During the afternoon of the 4th, we had a fresh northerly breeze. Seeing a bay to the eastward at three o'clock, we stood towards it: but not seeing a harbour, nor any inhabitants, we hore away to the south.

At noon on the 5th, we were about three miles distant from shore. In the asternoon we were visited by several canoes, full of Indians, who eagerly sold us a great number of good cloaks: tin kettles and brass pans were most coveted by those people, in exchange for the goods they supplied us with.

Instead