

I am justified in stating that there are many evidences of a steady and increasing interest in the welfare and prosperity of our Church in Kingsey.

First, the different congregation have evinced a lively interest in promoting, by all means in their power, the heartiness of our Church services. They have, with great regularity and diligence, attended the practice church music, and have been ready upon all occasions to assist in Church work.

The attendance of the various services have been uniformly good, and seldom indeed have I had to cast a discouraged glance at half-filled seats.

There has been, too, an increase in contributions, the various congregations responding to the call for increased assessment with cheerful alacrity.

Nor has the Parsonage been neglected; all parts of the Mission have contributed towards painting and repairing both the house and stable.

Appended is the usual financial statement.
