

gion to the sick, and preaching to the Immigrants and others who came under his charge, the inestimable riches of the grace of God.

The Reverend Gilbert Percy, A. B., having suffered severely from his onerous duties in St. Roch's in this city, and having been advised by his medical attendant to seek for renovation in change of air and scene, left Quebec on the 29th July, for Rivière du Loup, and finding his health sufficiently restored to undertake some Missionary duty proceeded by direction of the Bishop and under the auspices of this Society, to visit the destitute settlements on the banks of the Saguenay, where he arrived on the 2nd of August, and was kindly and hospitably received by Mr. Radford, Mr. David Price, and others. He occupied himself in visiting the different settlements and families in that neighbourhood, in public worship, in preaching and administering the sacraments, until the 20th of the same month, when he proceeded to Murray Bay, and visited the Protestant families resident there.

Mr. Percy thus concludes his Journal of this very interesting Missionary visit.

"I shall long retain a pleasing recollection of my visit to the several stations on the Saguenay. Every where I was received by the Protestant inhabitants of every class with expressions of extreme kindness and goodwill, expressions certainly not called forth by any feelings personal towards myself, a stranger altogether unknown, but by the character under which I appeared amongst them, that of a Clergyman and Minister of our holy religion."

"Protestants of various denominations all eagerly attended my ministrations—and from the great majority I heard but one wish: that they might have a clergyman resident among them.—They professed themselves ready to do their utmost towards the maintenance of a Minister—and I doubt not that these professions were made in full sincerity and truth.—If a clergyman was stationed either
