VICTORIA PARK.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
The wild birds are beginning to find out Victoria Park. Tree creepers, wrens, blackbirds, woodpeckers and humming birds (later) are to be seen. Sometimes a squirrel pops from a tree and buries a nut. The trees, among which are some splendid ones, require more sustenance than they get from the almost exhausted ground. That should be in the form of manure dug in or placed around the roots this fall. Some of these trees have many dead branches, which tend to show that manure is required.
