

DEMAND BETTER GRAIN FACILITIES

In answer to a question of Mr. Scott as to insurance rates compared with Portland he said they were slightly higher as this port was penalized on account of the St. Lawrence. The port was not more hazardous than those to the south as statistics proved.

The Tramp Steamships
J. T. Knight said he would like to point out that tramp steamers had the same rights as liner boats and all were placed at the discretion of the harbor master. He believed more berths and conveyors were necessary if the grain trade through this port was to grow.

Mr. Scott said a broker in New York had said ships did not like to come to St. John, but gave no reason for it, and asked if any of those present could explain this.
D. W. Ledingham said he thought it was largely a matter of lack of knowledge of real conditions and he did not think any captain would ever be here who would say anything against the port.

Commissioner Bullock gave evidence as to the form of harbor control and method adopted in handling the boats. He said the city had six deep water berths on the west side and two on the east side; the Government had four deep water berths on the west side and two on the east side. He said there were needed additional berths on the west side and the grain conveyors extended to serve all the berths there and it was hoped the C. N. R. would develop terminals on the east side of the harbor. He also expressed the opinion that the city was not getting enough grain over the C. N. R.

F. D. Alward, harbor master told of his duties in connection with the docking of boats and said the C. P. R. was the only line carrying passengers and mail and these boats were given a preference.

Good Handle Much More.
J. C. Kirby, resident engineer of the C. P. R., presented a map of the layout on the west side, and explained it to the commission. He said that with the extension of the grain conveyors to No. 7 berth it would be possible to handle 2,500,000 bushels more per year of grain, and with the extension to No. 16 the additional amount depended on the class of boats and the amount they could carry.

R. J. Anderson, superintendent of the C. P. R. elevator, said great care was exercised to prevent the mixing of grain, and R. A. Smith, superintendent of the C. N. R. elevator, confirmed this statement. Both said they had no knowledge of any grain having been mixed in the elevators here.

Thomas Nagle said the great need of the port was more berths, and said if these were provided his firm felt they could increase the number of tramp steamers coming here for grain.

Living Cost In France Is Climbing
Paris, Oct. 19.—The cost of living in France is increasing rapidly. Taking the cost in 1914 as an index figure, statistics for 100 commodities today give the number 331 against 289 for the corresponding period last year, and there seems no reason why this will not reach the 400 mark of the previous high-water mark of 370, which was attained at the end of 1919.

Maine Guide Is Shot On Hunting Trip

Bangor, Me., Oct. 19.—Sanford Hodgkins, one of the best known guides in this section of the State, was the first victim of a hunting accident since the opening of the big game season. He was shot while in the woods with a party of hunters, according to word received by Sheriff Orman B. Fernandez from Hancock County.

Hodgkins was an old-time guide, living in Burlington, and also at times in Enfield. The shooting, which resulted in his death, occurred in Township No. 8 in Hancock County, about 15 miles from Burlington.

Mr. Hodgkins and his brother had charge of large camps at Pistol Lake for the American Woolen Company.

Corbett Calls Peter Greatest of All Big Men of the Ring.
St. Louis, Oct. 19.—James J. Corbett reformed heavyweight, currently engaged in uplifting the drama, tells the world the greatest heavyweight of them all was Peter Jackson, the black man, Corbett doesn't even except Bob Fitzsimmons or Jack Dempsey.

"I saw Jackson box an exhibition with Fitz at the old California A. C.," Corbett relates, "and it was like a teacher giving a pupil a lesson. No wonder Fitz wanted to battle the world at large—BAR JACKSON."

Corbett battled Jackson himself. They fought over four hours without reaching a decision. The bout was finally stopped and called a contest.

"I started to box with Jackson early in the fight," Corbett tells, "and he went right along, landing just as often as I did. I figured he would tire. At about the fifteenth round he was puffing. I thought I had him. I stepped in and started to slug with him. Billy Delaney was in my corner. Don't slug with him, Jim. He'll kill you," shrieked Delaney.

"I took his advice. It probably saved me from being flattened. I went back to boxing and held my own. I never met another fighter like Jackson. He was just as good a boxer as a slugger, and great at both. That's why I hold him up as the ideal fighting type."

Forget the Optometrist
The highest thing one professionally placed for serving the public can have said of him is that he above all is a man to go to for an honest, impartial opinion.

Following this aim it is contended in all candour and commonsense that the confidence created through the years in Sharpe's Optometrist is not simply and solely a matter of professional skill.
