wait for your pay till I draw my pension.

'Pension!' said the groceryman,

'What are you giving me? What you going to get a pension for?'

'Holding horses for the cavalry at the armory during the riot, and carrying baked beans,' said the boy, as he took a salt pickle out of a barrel. 'I was down at the armory every day, and when the calvary would come in from a scout, I would hold horses, and when anybody wanted a pan full of baked beans sent to the armory I had to carry them. I suppose there ain't a better bean carrier in this town, but there is too much danger holding horses. I have got wounds all over my feet, where horses stepped on me. I asked the governor if he didn't think I could get a pension, and he said it wouldn't do any hurt to make application. He said people had asked for pensions from the government for less than being walked on by horses.'

'Well, let me give you a pointer,' said the groceryman, as he covered up the pickle barrel, and laid a piece of a bar of railroad iron on top of it. 'You won't get the pension and you won't get.

of railroad iron on top of it. 'You won't get no pension, and you won't get no pension, and you won't get hor raisins. But, where is your pa? He has not showed up for ten days.'

'We don't know where pa is, but we have telegraphed to govern he has a frontage of 93\frac{1}{2} feet on Cunarl St. and 50 feet on Duke St., and will be sold with best business stands in town. The buildings are frontage of repair and suitable for Warehouse or Factory-Cossesion Given on the first of June next. Price Low and Terms Moderate. have telegraphed to several places to try and head him off, but we can't find him. He started for the woods just as him. He started for the woods just as soon as it began to rain dead Polax, and he is safe unless he has run against a tree. You see, pa has been taking a good deal of interest in the labor question, and he has attended all the meetings and drank some beer, and he has told the men in the saloons that all they had to do was to get up and make the fur fly, and the bloated capitalist would cry 'penula' and grant anything. He became quite a socialist himself, and was in favor of dividing up all the money in the country every thirty days. He told the Polax to go down to Bay View and then the soldiers would run. When they started to clean out the soldiers, pa got in a street car to ride

When they started to clean out the soldiers, pa got in a street car to ride down there, cause he was tired working his jaw. When the soldiers fired on the mob, and the crowd began to run, pa crawled under the seat of the car, and just then the off mule began to kick the tin dashboard of the car, and pa thought it was artillery or dynamite, and he began to pray, and he crawled out the window and run. The mob yelled, and pa thought they wuz after him, and he whooped it up pretty lively for a fat man, and passed the Milwaukee Garden just as the police was clubbing the mob there, and pa got hit, of course, and he kept running. Mathinks he will stop when he gets to the Mississippi river, cause pa never was very fond of water. If pa had taken my advice, and kept his mouth shut, and just held horses, or carried beams and other fixed ammunition he need not now be an outcast. But some men never have any sease. The atreet car

She's fooled the boarders three days now on liver, and they think they have had spring chicken, a la mode beef, and spring lamb with mint sauce. We have got six hens, and I am going to trade any roller skates off for a rooster. They are digging a sewer in our street, and if worse comes to worse I can take up a collection of lunch out of the tin palls that the workmen leave on the sidewalk. O, things are not as bad as you would think, with a big head like mine to plan. Say, how would you like to trade a good mackerel for a Chinese god?
