THE EXILE FROM HOME.

The valley's red and gold today, And torches sign to me
From hilltops where my fancies play And where I long to be.

Through country ways, and down Forgotten paths in autumn guise, And stubble fields of brown. Through silent woods my fancy strays-

Soft-carpeted with red. And fringed with gold the Autumn lays— More splendid overhead. Then out upon the travelled road, To pause and hear afar

The cracking of the harvest load Where tardy garners are. To be alone for long, and gaze Upon the village blest,
And watch it live these golden days

In Autumn peace and rest! e Each cherished spot, each boyhood track,

Each hill and flaming tree,
Is whispering today "Come back— Come home again, with me."

Like the circling ripples which spread from where a pebble is thrown into a placid lake, the discussion upon the annex ation of Maine goes on and on. The Washington Post has heralded it almost within the shadow of the White House. The Winnipeg Telegram has spread it on the breezes that sweep the boundless prairie. The Telegram pays the Guardian the pretty compliment of having "hitched our chariot to a star," and ends a elever review of our article with the following: "The only weakness in the Guardian's scheme is the absence of a quid pro quo. What is Canada to give in exchange for the Winnipeg Telegram has spread it on the breezes that sweep the boundless in the Niobe and the Rainbow."
