THE CATHOLIC REGISTER

Thursday, August 31st, 1905

"I shall never repent the preserva- above the rumbling in the chimney, tion of my self-respect, sir," "Forgive me if I say that was heard a wailing, rushing sound Edward. I will not sacrifice it at your bid- which shook the walls as though ding, and that I will not pursue the giant's hand were on them; then a track which you would have me take hoarse roar as if the sea had risen and to which the secret share you then such a whirl and tumult that have had in this late separation the air seemed mad; and then, with tends."

and looking at him as though curious | terval of rest. to know if he were quite resolved again, and said in the calmest voice light that evening. Blessings on the -eating his nuts meanwhile,-

Edward, my father had a son, scrong measures.

though in a gentler tone, "I have the conflict. reflected many times on what occurtruth. Hear what I have to say."

said Edward, "but it will be but and red curtains in the very eyes of to call one down upon his fellow- ed. least of all, upon his own child-than Mr. Willet sat in what had been his he has to make one drop of rain or accustomed place five years before, howling like a Christian, and has flake of snow fall from the clouds with his eyes on the eternal boiler; above us at his impious bidding. and had sat there since the clock Beware, sir, what you do.

exceedingly undutiful, so horribly constant snore (though he was wide profane," rejoined his father, turning awake), and from time to time put- Parkes. his face lazily towards him, and ting his glass to his lips, or knocking cracking another nut, "that I posi- the ashes out of his pipe, and filling tively must interrupt you here. It it anew. It was now half-past ten. to go on, upon such terms as these. his companions, as of old, and for If you will do me the favor to ring two mortal hours and a half, none little time without speaking, you'll with such a trembling hand that the said and the fast pattering on the glass, a lengthened howl, the waves of wind His father rose a little higher still, swept on, and left a moment's in

Cheerily, though there were none and earnest, dropped gently down abroad to see it, shone the Maypole you, entertaining low and disobedient candle, meat, drink, and company, six years old to twelve. love and duty in their best and truest did it drive and rathe at the casesense, finds himself repelled at every ment, emulous to extinguish that sen friends were silent now.

red between us when we first discuss- ish bounty, of that goodly tavern ! tive, and opened his eyes. ed this subject. Let there be a con- It was not enough that one fire roarfidence between us; not in terms, but ed and sparkled on its spacious hearth; in the tiles which paved and out him.

"As I anticipate what it is, and compassed it, five hundred flickering fires burnt brightly also. It was been mentioned for the last time at establishment in life, and the preser- that hung upon the walls, were happened to detain him. vation of that gentility and becom-ing pride which our family have so long sustained—if in short, you ar? resolved to take your own courss, you must take it and my curse with it. I am very sorry, but there's oak wainscoting, the beams, the a crash in the Forest to-night, chairs, the seats reflected it in a reckon and many a broken broken "The curse may pass your lips," deep dull glimmer. There were fires upon the ground to-morrow. any man on earth has greater power their liquor, in the pipes they smok- John.

struck eight, giving no other signs of after a minute's contemplation, "hear "You are so very irreligious, so life than breathing with a loud and the wind say 'Maypole?"

Ceylon tea direct from the Gardens of the finest tea producing country in the world. Sold only in Lead Packets 25c, 30c, 40c, 50c, 60c per Ib.-By all Grocers. Black, Mixed or Green, Highest Award. St. Louis 1904.

red-deep ruby, glowing red-old cur- transmission to Chigwell at various you? What do you mean? Say sometain of the window, blending into one times and at a vast expense, of some thing, or I'll be the death of you, I who being a fool like you, and, like rich stream of brightness, fire and five and forty runaways varying from will."

The profusion too, the rich and lav- or die. He chose the former alterna- them.

"If he don't come in five misutes," said John, "I shall have supper with-turned his father coldly, "I decline. not enough that one red curtain shut eight o'clock. Messrs. Parkes and I couldn't possibly. I am sure it the wild night out, and shed its Cobb being used to this style of conwould put me out of temper, which cerful influence on the room. In versation, replied without difficulty is a state of mind I can't endure. If every saucepan lid, and candlestick, that to be sure Solomon was very you intend to mar my plans for your and vessel of copper, brass, or tin late, and they wondered what had

"It's enough to carry der, and came a little nearer. you must take it, and my curse with tas of the same rich color. The old great guns, indeed. There'll be many chairs, the seats, reflected it in a reckon, and many a broken branch ter dark on this day, for seven and "It won't 'break anything in the "Let it try. I give it leave -what's that?" "The wind," cried Parkes.

been all night long.' "Did vou ever, sir," asked John,

"Why, what man ever did?" said

"Nor 'aboy,' perhaps?" added John.

"No. Nor that neither." "Very good, sir," said Mr. Willet, is quite impossible we can continue Mr. Cobb and long Phil Parkes were perfectly unmoved; "then if that was

Mr. Willet, in his frenzy, was so sentiments, he disinherited and cursed one morning after breakfast. The cir-the bleak waste out of doors! Withcumstance occurs to me with a sin- in, what carpet like its crunching each other, and at old John. From beginning to roll in an alarming mangular clearness of recollection this sand, what music merry as its crack- the time he had pasted it up with ner, and certain gutteral sounds, as evening. I remember eating muffins ling logs, what perfume like its kit- his own hands, Mr. Willet had never of a choking man, to issue from his at the time, with marmalade. He chen's dainty breath, what weather by word or sign alluded to the sub-led a misgrable life (the son, I genial as its hearty warmth! Bless-ject, or encouraged any one else to covering in some degree, plucked him mean) and died early; it was a happy ings on the old house, how sturdily it do so. Nobody had the least notion off his victim by main force, and release on all accounts; he degraded stood! How did the vexed wind chafe what his thoughts or opinions were, placed the little clerk of Chigwell in the family very much. It is a sad and roar about its stalwart roof; connected with it; whether he remem-circumstance, Edward, when a father how did it pant and strive with its bered it or forgot it; whether he round the room, he implored them all fir.ds it necessary to resort to such wide chimneys, which still poured has any idea that such an event had to lock the house door and close and forth from their hospitable throats, ever taken place. Therefore, even har the shutters of the room, with-"It is," replied Edward, "and it is great clouds of smoke, and puffed while he slept, no one ventured to out a moment's loss of time. The sad when a son, proffering him his defiance in its face, how, above all, refer to it in his presence; and for latter request did not tend to reassuch sufficient reasons, these his cho- sure his hearers, or to fill them with the greatest expedition; and having turn, and forced to disobey. Dear cheerful glow, which would not be Mr. Willet had got by this time in- handed him a bumper of brandy and father," he added, more earnestly put down and seemed the brighter for to such a complication of knots, that water, nearly boiling hot, waited to it was perfectly clear he must wake hear what he might have to tell

> "Oh, Johnny," said Solomon, shaking him by the hand. "Oh, Parkes. Oh, Tommy Cobb. Why did I leave this house to-night? On the nineteenth of March-of all nights in the rear, on the nineteenth of March!" They all drew closer to the fire.

Parkes, who was nearest to the door, started and looked over his shoulder. Mr. Willet, with great indignation, nouired what the devil he meant by that-and then said, "God forgive me," and glanced over his own shoul-

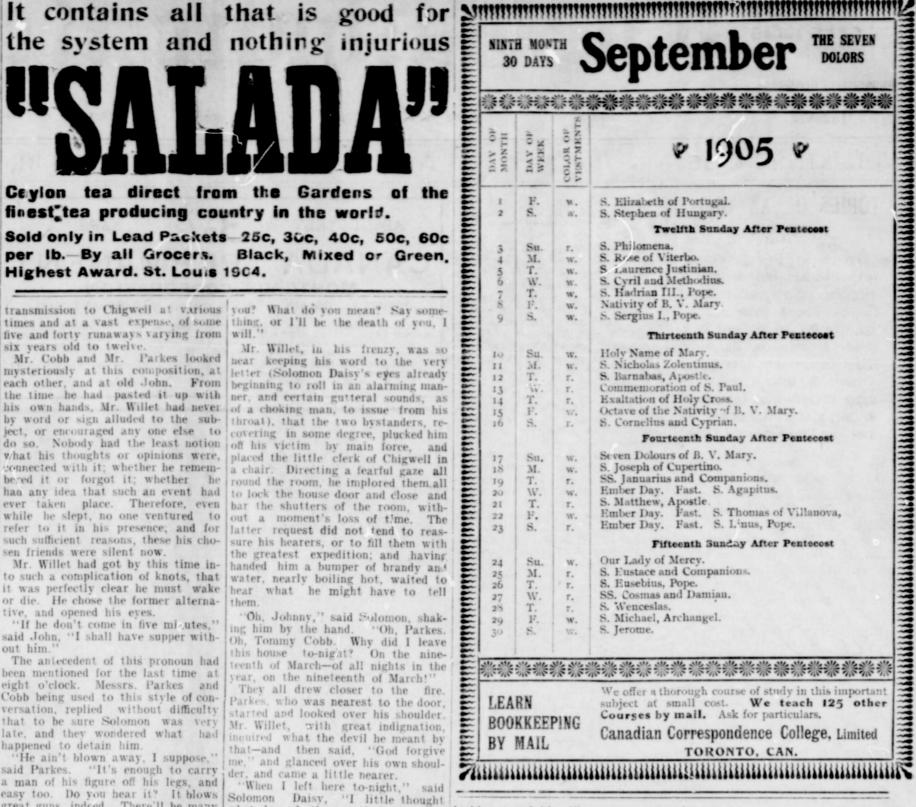

"When I left here to-night," said It blows Solomon Daisy, "I little thought what day of the month it was. have gone alone into the church aftwenty years. I have heard it said that as we keep our birthdays when " It's How the wind roars!"

Nobody spoke. All eyes were fastened on Solomon. "I might have known," he said,

'what night it was, by the foul weanineteenth of March."

"Go on," said Tom Cobb, in low voice. "Nor I neither." a the wind just now, and you'll wait a his lips; put it down upon the floor wind came up, there crossed me - so close, that h felt relieved.

'but that's not all.' empty breath. I do not believe that the drinkers, in their buttons, in the nines that are alive, so the ghosts of dead sir, is to come?" asked John, paus- of long Phil Parkes and Mr. Cobb, people, who are not easy in their ing in the act of wiping his face up- who were rather more nervous than graves, keep the day they died upon. on his apron. "What are you a-go- himself. Mr. Willet, after seeing ing to tell us of next?"

What I saw. forward.

"When I opened the church door to abated one jot of its fury. ther. There's no such night in the come out," said the little man, with whole year round as this is, always. an expression of face which bore am-I never sleep quietly in my, hed on the ple testimony to the sincerity of his conviction, "when I opened the church door to come out, which did suddenly for I wanted to get it

Solomon Daisy raised his glass to shut again before another gust of story. The more he thought of it, looking round him like a man who late, and was long past their usual hour of separating, the cronies part-'Perhaps not," returned his friend, ed for the night. Solomon Daisy, with a fresh candle in his lantern, rethem to the door, returned to collect his thoughts with the assistance of "Saw!" echoed all three, bending the boiler, and to listen to the storm of wind and rain, which had not yet

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1

Before old John had looked at the boiler quite twenty minutes, he got his ideas into a focus, and brought them to bear upon Solomon Daisy's the more impressed he became with to the door. Return to this roof no word. more, I beg you. Go, sir, since you go to the Devil, at my express desire. Good-day.'

other word or look, and turned his back upon the house forever.

The father's face was slightly flushed and heated, but his manner was settle. But certain it is that old No man stirred. quite unchanged, as he rang the bell his entrance.

"Peak-if that gentleman who has just gone out"-

"I beg your pardon, sir, Mr. Edward?'

"Were there more than one, dolt that you ask the question?-If that hear? If he should call himself at tell him so, and shut the door.

So, it soon got whispered about that Mr. Chester was unfortupate in quite agree with you." his son, who had occasioned him great grief and sorrow. And the good peomarvelled the more at his equanimity and even temper, and said what an amiable nature that man must have, who, having undergone so much, could be so placid and SO calm. And when Edward's name was and looked very grave; and those who had sons about his age, waxed wrathful and indignant, and hoped, for Virtue's sake, that he was dead. And the world went on turning round as usual, for five years, contry again. cerning which this Narrative is silent. Parkes in a whisper.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

One wintry evening, early in the year of our Lord one thousand sevwind arose as it grew dark, superhuman. looks. A bitter storm of sleet, sharp, dense, and icy-cold, swept the streets, and rattled on the Mr. Cobb. trembling windows. Sign-boards, though the earth were troubled.

weather. In coffee houses of the bet- the idea-a finger-post and a mile- rattle in his head. ter sort, guests crowded round the stone beside him. Mr. Cobb likewise "Tell us what's the matter, sir," figures round the hearth; who talk- the disappearance of his son Joseph, ed of vessels foundering at sea, and acquainting the nobility and gentry all hands lost, related many a dis- and the public in general with the mal tale of shipwreck and drowned circumstances of his having left his men, and hoped that some they knew home; describing his dress and apwere safe, and shook their heads in pearance; and offering a rewarn of five doubt. In private dwellings, children pounds to any person or persons who clustered near the blaze, listening would pack him up and return him with timid pleasure to tales of ghosts | safely to the Maypole at Chigwell, or and goblins and tall figures clad in lodge him in any of his Majesty's white standing by bedsides, and peo- jails until such time as his father ple who had gone to sleep in 'old should come and claim him. In this churches and being overlooked had advertisement Mr. Willet had obstinfound themselves alone there at the ately persisted, despite the advice dead hour of night, until they shud- and entreaties of his friends, in desdered at the thought of the dark cribing his son as a "young boy"; rooms up-stairs, yet loved to hear and furthermore as being from eigh-the wind moan too, and hoped it teen to a couple of feet shorter than would continue bravely. From time to time these happy in-door people stopped to listen, or one held up his finger and cried "Hark!" and then, ductive of any other effect than the the bell, the servant will show you of the company had pronounced one hear it say both words very plain.

"Fast as a top," said Mr. Cobb.

Whether people, by dint of sitting ing for a few moments, they could have no moral sense remaining; and together in the same place and the clearly hear, above the roar and tusame relative positions, and doing mult out of doors, this shout repeatexactly the same things for a great ed; and that with a shrillness and Edward left the room without an- many years, acquire a sixth sense, or energy, which denoted that it came some unknown power of influencing from some person in great distress or each other which serves them in its terror. They looked at each other, steal, is a question for philosophy to turned pale, and held their breath.

John Willet, Mr. Parkes, and Mr. It was in this emergency that Mr. again, and addressed his servant on Cobb, were one and all firmly of the Willet displayed something of that opinion that they were very jolly strength of mind and plentitude of companions-rather choice spirits mental resource, which rendered him than otherwise; that they looked at the admiration of all his friends and each other every now and then as if neighbors. After looking at Messrs. there were a perpetual interchange of Parkes and Cobb for some time in ideas going on among them; that no silence, he clapped his two hands to man considered himself or his neigh- his cheeks, and sent forth a roar gentleman should send here for his bor by any means silent; and that which made the glasses dance and wardrobe, let him have it, do you each of them podded occasionally rafters ring-a long-sustained, diswhen he caught the eye of another, cordant bellow, that rolled onward any time, I'm not at home. You'll as if he would say, "You have ex- with the wind, and startling every pressed yourself extremely well, sir, echo, made the night a hundred times in relation to that sentiment, and I more boisterous-a deep, loud, dismal bray, that sounded like a human

The room was so very warm, the gong. Then, with every vein in his tobacco so very good, and the fire so head and face swollen with the great ple who heard this and told it again, very soothing, that Mr. Willet by de- exertion, and his countenance suffused grees began to doze; but as he had with a lively purple, he drew a litperfectly acquired, by dint of long the nearer to the fire, and turning his habit, the art of smoking in his sleep back upon it, said with dignity,and as his breathing was pretty "If that's any comfort to anybody, much the same, awake or asleep, sav- they're welcome to it. If it ain't, I ing that in the latter case he some- am sorry for 'em. If either of you spoken, Society shook its head and times experienced a slight difficulty two gentlemen likes to go out and laid its finger on its lip, and sighed, in respiration (such as a carpenter see what's the matter, you can. I'm meets with when he is planing and not curious, myself." comes to a knot), neither of his com- While he spoke the cry drew nearer panions was aware of the cir- and nearer, footsteps passed the wincumstance, until he met with one of dow, the latch of the door was rais- an hour. the impediments and was obliged to ed, it opened, was violently closed again, and Solomon Daisy, with a > rain streaming from his disordered of March. It came upon me with a dress, dashed into the room. A more complete picture of terror

Neither of them said any more until Mr. Willet came to another knot than the little man presented, it very same moment, I heard a voice to show that bad weather was the -one of surprising obduracy- which would be difficult to imagine. The outside the tower-rising from among very time for such appearance; and en hundred and eighty, a keen north bade fair to throw him into convul- perspiration stood in beads upon his and sions, but which he got over at last face, his knees knocked together, his night came on with black and dismal without waking, by an effort quite every limb trembled, the power of ar- rupted the speaker, and begged that argued the matter with so much in-"He sleeps uncommon hard," said he stood, panting for breath, gazing to him and was staring directly over that John was only saved from havon them with such livid ashy looks,

Mr. Parkes, who was possibly a that they were infected with his fear, shaken past endurance in their creak-ing frames, fell crashing on the pave-some disdain, "Not a bit on it"; and reflecting his dismayed and horrorment; old tottering chimneys reeled directed his eyes towards a handbill stricken visage, stared back again and staggered in the blast; and many pasted over the chimney-piece, which without venturing to question him; a steeple rocked again that night, as was decorated at the top with a until old John Willet, in a fit of temwoodcut representing a youth of ten- porary insanity, made a dive at his It was not a time for those who der years running away very fast, cravat, and, seizing him by that porcould by any means get light and with a bundle over his shoulder at tion of his dress, shook him to and warmth, to brave the fury of the the end of a stick, and-to carry out fro until his very teeth appeared to Parkes with great submission pledged drinking, such as banished all fear fire, forgot to be political, and told turned his eyes in the same direction said John, "or I'll kill you. Tell desired him to proceed. After waiteach other with a secret gladness and surveyed the placard as if that us what's the matter, sir, or in an- ing until a violent gust of wind and the fire again, and as is common on let. "I put the heart (as you call that the blast grew fiercer every were the first time he had ever beheld other second I'll have your head un- rain, which seemed to shake even such occasions, propounded all manminute. Each humble tavern by the it. Now, this was a document which der the biler. How dare you look that sturdy house to its foundation, ner of leading questions calculated water-side had its group of uncouth Mr. Willet had himself indited on like that? Is anybody a-following of had passed away, the little man com-Now, this was a document which der the hiler. How dare you look that sturdy house to its foundation, ner of leading questions calculated safe home again, and his standing spoon tinkled in it like a little bell; Mr. Willet was right. After listenand continued thus,-

KIDNEY

"Have I ever said that we are always brought back to this subject in some strange way, when the nineteenth of this month comes round ? Do you suppose it was by accident, I forgot to wind up the church clock? gether. I never forgot it at any other time, though it's such a clumsy thing that it has to be wound up every day. Why should it escape my memory on this day of all others?

"I made as much haste down there as I could when I went from here, but I had to go home first for the keys; and the wind and rain being dead against me all the way, it was pretty well as much as I could do at times to keep my legs. I got there at last, opened the church door, and went in. I had not met a soul all the way, and you may judge whether it was dull or not. Neither of you would bear me company. If you could have known what was to come John, you'd have been in the right.

"The wind was so strong that it was pushing on the other side. How- bilities, I don't myself think," would have stood stock-still in half not quite easy in his theory. "that ed up for once?" said John.

leave the church, it came upon me all ing in such weather-I only know "Johnny's dropped off," said Mr. lighted lantern in his hand, and the at once that this was the nineteenth that I wouldn't, if I was one." the graves.'

his head) saw anything, he would ing to retract his opinion by the people, he had better put his pocket- highly creditable manner, and to dishandkerchief over his head. Mr. play a capacity both of eating and and John Willet turning to Solomon injury from his fright. plied the walls. I felt the tells shake. I saw the ropes sway to and fro. And I heard that voice."

Cobb.

stretching out my finger I could have touched it- something in the likeness of a man. It was bareheaded to the storm. It turned its face without stopping, and fixed its eyes on mine. It was a ghost-a spirit."

In the excess of his emotion (for he fell back trembling in his chair, and least a score of people, and most to question him no further), his ans- breakfast time to-morrow; he deter-Willet, who happened to be seated going to bed. close beside him

Cobb, looking eagerly by turns 'Who was it?' the nineteenth of March." A profound silence ensued.

"If you'll take my advice," "we had better one and all, keep this a secret. Such tales would not be liked at the Warren. Let us with a gentleman of his natur', and was as much as I could do to shut keep it to ourselves for the present set one's self right besides. Halloa, the church door by putting my whole time at all events, or we may get there! Hugh-Hugh. Hal-loa!' weight against it; and even as it was, into trouble, and Solomon may lose it burst wide open twice, with such his place. Whether it was really as dozen times, and startled every pigstrength that any of you would have he says, or whether it wasn't, is no con from its slumbers, a door in one sworn, if you had been leaning matter. Right or wrong, nobody of the ruinous old buildings opened, against it, as I was, that somebody would believe him. As to the proba- and a rough voice demanded what ever, I got the key turned, went into Mr. Willet, eyeing the corners of the even have his sleep in quiet. the belfry, and wound up the clock- room in a manner which showed that which was very near run down, and like some other philosophers he was growler, that you're not to be knock-a ghost as had been a man of sense "As I took up my lantern again to in his lifetime, would be out a-walk-

But this heretical doctrine was kind of shock, as if a hand had struck strongly opposed by the other three, the thought upon my forehead; at the who quoted a great many precedents Mr. Parkes (who had had a ghost in Here old John precipitately inter- his family, by the mother's side) ticulation was quite gone; and there if Parkes (who was seated opposite genuity and force of illustration, > have the goodness to mention it. Mr. opportune appearance of supper, to Parkes apologized and remarked that which they applied themselves with he was only listening; to which Mr. a dreadful relish. Even Solomon Willet angrily retorted, that his lis- Daisy himself, by dint of the elevattening with that kind of expression ing influences of fire, lights, brandy, on his face was not agreeable, and and good company, so far recovered that if he couldn't look like other as to handle his knife and fork in a

> > Supper done, they crowded round

"Never tell me that it was my fan- Daisy, notwithstanding these tempcy, or that it was any other sound tations, adhered so steadily to his two before to show the way. which I mistook for that I tell you original account, and repeated it so of. I heard the wind whistle through often, with such slight variations, ent grace, and a longing glance at the arches of the church. I heard and with such solemn asservations the bottles. Old John, laying strict the steeple strain and creak. I heard of truth and reality, that his hearers the rain as it came driving against were (with good reason) more astonished than at first. As he took John Willet's view of the matter in regard to the propriety of not bruiting the blustering darkness out of doors. 'What did it say?'' asked Tom tale abroad, unless the spirit should

"I don't know what: I don't know be necessary to take immediate coun- had been his, own pilot, he would that it spoke. It gave a kind of cry, sel with the elergyman, it was sol- have walked into a deep horsepond as any one of us might do, if some- emply resolved that it should be with n a few hundred yards of his thing dreadful followed us in a hushed up and kept quiet. And as own house, and would certainly have dream, and came upon us unawares; most men like to have a secret to terminated his career in that ignoble and then it died off; seeming to pass tell which may exalt their own im. sphere of action. But Hugh, who had quite round the church." "I don't see much in that," said John, drawing a long breath, and As it was by this time growing John drawing a long breath, and As it was by this time growing A a sense of his own wisdom, and a desire that Mr. Haredale should be impressed with it likewise. At length, to the end that he might sustain a principal and important character in the affair; and might have the start of Solomon and his two friends, "Whose?" they all three cried to- through whose means he knew the adventure, with a variety of exaggerations, would be known to at waved his hand as if entreating them likely to Mr. Haredale himself by wer was lost on all but old John mined to repair to the Warren before

'He's my landlord," thought John, "Who!" cried Parkes and Toru as he took a candle in his hand, and at setting it down in a corner out of the Solomon Daisy and at Mr. Willet. wind's way, opened a casement in the rear of the house, looking towards "Gentlemen," said Mr. Willet, after the stables. "We haven't met of a long pause, "you needn't ask. The late years so often as we used to do likeness of a murdered man. This is -changes are taking place in the family-it's desirable that I should stand as well with them, in point of digsaid kity, as possible-the whispering about of this here tale will anger him -it's good to have confidences

> When he had repeated this shout a said was amiss now, that a man couldn't "What! Haven't you sleep enough,

'No," replied the voice, as the speaker yawned and shook himselff 'Not half enough.''

"I don't know how you can sleep, with the wind a-blowing and roaring about you, making the tiles fly like a pack of cards," said John; "but no matter for that. Wrap yourself up in something or another, and come with me, and look sharp about it.'

Hugh, with much low growling and muttering; went back into his lair; and presently reappeared, carrying a lantern and a cudgel, and enveloped from head to foot in an old, frowsy, slouching horse-cloth. Mr. Willet rereived this figure at the back door, and ushered him into the bar, while he wrapped himself in sundry greatcoats and capes, and so tied and knotted his face in shawls and handkerchiefs, that how he breathed was a mystery.

"You don't take a man out of doors at near midnight in such weather, himself to do so, if again required, of his having sustained any lasting without putting some heart into him, do you, master?" said Hugh.

"Yes I do sir," returned Mr. Wilit) into him when he has brought me steady on his legs ain't of so much rors and surprises. But Solomon consequence. So hold that light up, if you please, and go on a step of

> Hugh obeyed with a very indifferinjunctions on his cook to keep the doors locked in his absence, and to open to nobody but himself on pain of dismissal, followed him into the

The way was wet and dismal, and appear again, in which case it would the night so black, that if Mr. Willet apart from that endowment, could (n

