WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1905.

A GENTLEMAN GONE.

The following trabute to the foremost statesman the neighboring republic produced is from the London Free Press :-

Home-loving, hearty, human John Hay has passed to his reward. He was a gentleman of the old school. Trained under Lincoln as his private secmetary it was us good fortune to play a large part in upbuilding the United States till the hour of his death. In fact those lines of foreign policy laid down by him have made Uncle Sam unique among the nations of the earth, and they will not be departed from, though their creator lies cold in death.

For the past forty years John Hay's finger had been on the pulse of the nation. But he was not puffed up. He was a man of wide sympathies that knew no class or creed dis visions. He was not a politician, he was that rarer being, a statesman. He loved his native America and he gave his life to her; he died in harness. No one ever heard of his scheming to be nominated for the Presidency. But had the voice of the people called be would have assumed the responsibility as a duty he bore to his countrymen.

It is said of him, and it is a refreshing story in this world of stress and striving, that he was asked at his bachelor dinner how long his honeymoon would last. "Why," he replied, "I expect it to last the rest of my life." And it did. His wife of all his family was alone with him when the end came. His intimacy with Lincoln, the very atmosphere of his birthplace in Indiana, and his leanings toward literature all tended to make him a home-loving gentleman of the old school.

With this regard it is not hard for us to believe that John Hay wrote Jim Bludsoe and Little Breeches. Only the human being could say:

He weren't no saint-but at jedg-

ment
I'd run my chance with Jim,
'Longside of some pious gentlemen
That wouldn't shook hands with him;
He seen his duty, a dead-sure thing,
And went for it thar and then,
And Christ ain't a-going to be too hard

On a man that died for men, And only a man who had got at the heart of things could pen:

How did he git that? Angels, He could never have walked in that

They jest scooped down and toted him

To whar it was safe and warm;
And I think that saving a little

And fotching him to his own, a dermed sight better business Than loafing around The Throne.

And the world can say, "Sweet Dreams" to John Hay who in his prime wrote:

Tender and warm the joys of life-Good friends, the faithful and the

My rosy children and my wife, So sweet to kiss, so fair to view-

So sweet ito kiss, so fair to view:
The night comes down the lights
burn blue,
And at my door the pale horse stands To bear me forth to unknown lands.

The United States has lost its foremost statesman, the world of let. ters, the inspirer of a host of insitators, and the whole world a true gentheman, homeloving, hearty and human.

Good-bye, John Hay.

ALD. ED. BELL HAS RESIGNED

Action of Minister of Finance due to position he holds with the Electric Railway.

He will be Asked to Reconsider his Action-Another Special Meeting of the Council.

Quite a little sensation was caused imong the aldermen last evening when Mayor Cowan read the resignation of Ald, Bell from the Council Board. The aldermen were so taken by surprise that they refused to accept the resignation, but passed a resolution asking the chairman of the Finance committee to reconsider his action and if he can find it at all possible to remain in office until the end of the year.

Ald. Bell's action, as he explained in his letter to his colleagues, is the result of much careful thought and consideration on his part. He has been appointed solicitor for the Electric Railway Company and in this capacity he should have the interests of the railway at heart, while as aldermen he should consider the city's interests first in dealing with the Railway Company. Thus he is the Railway Company. Thus he is placed in an awkward position and it has come to a point where he must choose between the solicitorship and his position as alderman. He had intended to resign his position at the Board when he was first appointed solicitor for the railway, but after a consultation with the city solicitor, who thought this action unnecessary, he decided to remain at the Board. Recent developments, however, have made him change his intentions. He would like to have remained at the Board to assist the Council in their deliberations on the many other important assist the Council in their deliberations on the many other important questions that will come under the finance department. And he expressed his regret at finding it advisable to tender his resignation.

Ald. Westman was soury that Ald. Bell had taken this course. He thought it a very serious thing for the Minister of Finance to resign when there were so many heavy duties resting on his department, especially this year. He spoke of Ald. Bell's ability as chairman of Finance and moved thut he be asked to reconsider his action as he (Ald. Westman) considered it in the city's interest that Ald. Bell should live out his term of office.

Ald, Politer regretted the action of Bell. Everyone recognized his Bell. Everyone recognized his ability and he was sure that if Ald. Bell had continued on he could have satisfied the electors who put him in office. Still Ald. Bell's position is a difficult one, and if it would relieve the strain which must be on his mind it might be just as well to accept his residential.

Ald. Westman's motion passed and Ald. Bell will be asked to reconsider.

If Ald, Bell's resignation is accepted Arthur J. Duan will be the new alderman. At the tast election Mr. Duan was the tenth man on the list, W. T. Piggott the eleventh and J. G. Kerr the twelfth.

Last dight's meeting of the Council was another special one, but the Mayor introduced a new idea by cutting short all discussions, and as a result the Council adjourned at a reasonable hour.

A really pleasing and acceptable feature was also introduced by Ald.

Mr. Wilson, who was in the audience, explained that there were many reasons. Plenty of work on hand might make the tenders higher and the distance away from the city has to be considered.
