Legal Decisions

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office--whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not--is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay up all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is a prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Questions.

Mamma is the sky a curtain

Hiding heaven from our sight?

Are the sun and moon but windows

Made to give the Angels light?

Are the stars bright flashing diamonds

Shining from God's hand afar?

And the clouds but veils of vapor

Dropped from heaven floating there.

If the sun's a window, mamma,

Don't the angels through it peep?

Watching o'er us while we sleep.

Is the rainbow just a ribbon

Girding heaven and earth about?

Or a railing made of roses

So the angels won't fall out?

Are the sighing in the tree tops

Sounds of praise--some angels sing?

And the snowy flakes of winter

Feathers falling from their wings?

Are the dew drops brightly shining

Kisses left by elves and fairies

When they slept among the flowers.

Is the lightning rockets flying

When the Prince of Glory smiles?

And the thunder but the rattle

Of a baby angel's drum!

SELECT STORY.

A Life for a Love.

BY L. T. MEADE.

CHAPTER XXX.

"I am sorry, Mr Wyndham," said

Captain Jellyby, "to have to offer you on your very first night on board my good ship very broken slumbers. We shall be lading with coals all night.

Are you easily disturbed by noise?

But I need scarcely ask, for that noise

would almost rouse the dead."

Gerald smiled.

"A broken night is nothing," he said; "at least to me. I suppose there always is a great commotion the last night before a vessel sails on a long voyage."

"Not as a rule--at least that way my way. We meant to break off and have a quiet time at midnight, and start operations again at six o'clock in the morning. But I've had directions from head quarters which oblige me to quicken my movements. Do you inconvenient, too?"

"What do you mean?" said Gerald,

the pulses round his heart suddenly quicken. "We sail at noon tomorrow."

"We sail at eight in the morning,

my good sir, and I, for one, call it decided inconvenient. (Yes, Oadgers,

what do you want? Get all hands possible on board.) I beg your pardon,

Mr Wyndham. (Yes, Oadgers.) Back

with you presently, sir."

The captain disappeared, and Wyndham went down to his cabin.

What did this sudden change mean?

Who had given the order? Was that really Helms who had been on board?

Well, Wyndham was in a manner master on this vessel. It was his own part of his property; he had been told over and over again by his father-in-law that on this voyage his own orders

ruled, he could give his own orders and short of anything which would jeopardize the safety of the boat, he could countermand an order which was putting everybody out; he did not choose to leave his native shore before
