The Origin of Canada's Name.

It is probable that few people know how Canada came to get its name. The origin of the name is very strange. The Spaniards visited there previous to the French and made search for gold and silver, and finding none, they often said amongst themselves, "Aca nada," meaning, "There is nothing here."

The Indians, who watched closely, learned this sentence and its meaning. Then came the French, and the Indians, who did not want them, supposing they had come on the same mission as the Spanish, kept pouring into their ears the Spanish sentence, "Aca nada." The French, who knew as little of the Spanish language as they, supposed that the incessantly recurring sound was the name of the country, and ultimately christened it Canada, which it has borne ever since.

Rapidly Disappearing.

Ottawa, August 11.—The visible supply of wheat in Canadian grain elevators is estimated by the Government authorities to-day at 2,125,142 bushels, as compared with 4,600,242 bushels in the same date last year. If the withdrawals continue at the same rate the supply will be exhausted when the new year's crop begins to come in about the middle of September.

There have been several estimates of this year's crop, the highest placing the average at 208 bushels per acre. Two independent estimates of the average have been made. The grain dealers place it at 12,550,000 acres and the Government experts at 11,744,700 acres. It is thus fairly certain that the wheat crop this year will be well over 200 million bushels and with favourable conditions prevailing may reach 250 million bushels.

Canada's War Debt.

Chicago Tribune.—Canada has not dealt in billions of dollars and millions of men, but Canada has nevertheless made commensurate war sacrifices in money, suffering and blood. The temper of the Canadian soldier has already been proven and approved in the theatre of war, but the same bravery of the home people in facing a rapidly rising public debt has had a much less spectacular setting. France, England and even Belgium are fighting and making sacrifices—but no greater sacrifices in proportion—in the midst of a struggle that actually threatens their existence, but Canada is giving lavishly of her best blood and money without any thought that physically, at least, she is in danger from the Teuton. Both life and money are more precious, too, to a country just entering upon a period of national development. Canada is giving humanity one of the real returns of a fraternal war. It is the triumph of the purest patriotism and unselfish devotion to the mother country.

The Flat Trousers.

They Were Worn Skin Tight and Led Men to Pad Their Legs.

The advent of the silk hat led to the introduction of trousers. Rich brooches and silk stockings did not correspond with stovepipe hats. Try them now and see if you think they do. So reformers set themselves to work to devise some neater garments congruous with the new headpiece. The result was trousers. There had, it is true, been some precursors of those inimitable garments. The Turk had worn voluminous twin bags on his legs, gathered and tied, bag fashion, at the ankles. The Cossacks, too, had found such things more convenient for horseback riding than any other garb, and "pantalons" were used in armies, especially by the French. But none of these nor any other garment that was worn prior to 1815 could be described as genuine trousers.

The first trousers worn in London were of plain, light colored cloth, and fitted very tightly; almost as tight, we may believe, as those in this country a generation ago. In the second season striped and other figured cloths were used by some, but such trousers were regarded as quite plebeian and fit for wearing only in bad weather when the streets were muddy, or as a sort of rough outing garb at the seaside. A favorite material for trousers worn by men of fashion was an elastic stockinet, which fitted literally "skin tight." Beneath such garments, to supply the deficiencies of nature, men were not averse to wearing false calves and other padding on their legs. Straps passing beneath the foot were used to keep the trouser legs held down in place—Exchange.

Chicago's divorce mills ground out 2458 divorces, 119 annulments of marriages and 27 decrees of separate maintenance in 1914, according to the first annual report of County Clerk Robert M. Switzer. There were 33,897 marriage licenses issued for the same period. Thus the divorces there were more than ten per cent of the marriages. Alimony estimated at $1,000,000 annually was awarded, no award being made in 1535 cases uncontented.
