

Jack Jones Fighter,
WINNER TAKES ALL, NEW STIRRING FILM.

Jack Jones scored a knockout in the second round of the fight with "Winner Takes All," at the Metropolitan Theatre to-night. To be exact, Jones literally four knockouts on the screen, knocking his opponents for a goal in four successive rounds, each more dramatic than the last.

It is with knockouts, in the way of the fast action play from the last movie story of the year, Saturday Evening Post writer, Evans, skillfully tailored to the screen measure by the master-hand of Ewart Adamson, scenarist and director with dynamic spirit by Van Dyke.

Jack Jones, alias Perry, "Blaze" cowboy, seely and bold, the dapper swell of a ranch superintendent on the nose for chiefly "winner's" hit boss. Its one of the toughest, toughest western scraps screened, Buck wins.

The cowboy, though green to the ring, takes on the local heavyweight champ for 200 "bucks" and knocks him out in the first round. First he puts to sleep with one blow the big fat fight promoter who catches insulting a little girl at the station.

Then the cowboy pugilist fights his way to championship fame. But he agrees to a crooked fight, so the promoters that made him, "break" him.

After falling passionately for a girl of night life, who prefers to play a millionaire for a percentage of her life, the "busted" cham is put into a framed championship fight, "Winner Takes All," which is probably the greatest screen prize ever shown.

The winnings include the winsome woman he really loves. He gets the clothes—or lack of clothes, the gayety, the giant folly of night life.

With a picture like "Tiger Thompson" it is easy to understand why Carey is the most beloved two-fisted hero of the films.

At the Nickel Theatre yesterday, this famous cowboy star opened an engagement in his new Hunt production, "The audience" which does not mean, however, that the thrill element is lacking. The picture for the mine, the hair-raising scene of the heroine from the careen-er's backboard, the train robbery and the hero of lights give "Tiger Thompson" all the punches that the exciting seeker craves.

It is not usual with such pictures, there is a logical reason for the thrill and underlying the entire picture is a human story whose leading character tugs mightily at the heart.

Marguerite Clayton is a winsome and fearless heroine, and John W. Brown and Jack Richardson prove themselves capable players they are by the audience actually hiss them in certain scenes.

Balfour Co's Opening
Play at Casino Theatre

GOLDEN'S GREAT SUCCESS
"THE FIRST YEAR" WILL BE THE ATTRACTION.

The greatest comedy ever written, "The First Year" the play which ran a lengthy season at the Little Theatre, and for 73 weeks on tour has been secured by J. Edmund Balfour, manager of the Balfour Theatre Company which opens an engagement at the Casino shortly. This engagement in itself, is more than an indication that the engagement of this popular company is going to be remembered by every man, woman and child who ever attend any sort of theatrical performance, for "The First Year" is a play whose fame has become not merely national, but world-wide. "The First Year" was produced by John Golden, the noted producer of "Comedians," plays such as "Lightnin'," "Seventh Heaven," "Papa To The Night" and "Three Wise Men."

Balfour's attention to detail is such that and playgoers can be assured of an exact duplicate, in every detail, of the original production. His special care is carried for each and every production. There are no waits as the Company makes up-to-date specialities. In spite of all rumors that the shape was back to stay, the change is still one of the smartest
