THE CAR SHOPS LETTER. recent conference with General Manager Scargeant, of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, a letter from that gentleman is now in the possession of Mayor Essery. Of the contents of the missive nothing may be known till the meeting of the aldermen on Monday night, as the mayor declines to let the press men peruse the document. The letter is understood to refer to the cocation of the Grand Trunk shops, about which there already have been negotiations with the company. Last year's council had before it a draft agreement, but it came to nothing, owing to the fact that Mr. Bell, solicitor for the G. T. R., and Mr. W. R. Meredith, solicitor for the site could not agree more the conditions. and Mr. W. R. Meredith, solicitor for the city, could not agree upon the conditions. At that time the general manager did not seem to be very anxious to have the shops concentrated, and the question remained open until a few weeks ago, when the Sarnia council made an unconditional offer of $100,000 for the establishment of the car shops in the west at that place. Then it was deemed expedient by the London civic authorities to try the effect of a resumption of negotiations. This was a proper step, seeing we are all agreed that London is by far the best point at which to establish the shops in their entirety.

It is understood that whatever action the London Council takes must be adopted speedily, as the railway authorities are anxious to have the question settled one

Some people have thought that the Grand Trunk manager would suggest that the new dicker might include the resumption by that line of the London and Por Stanley Railway, but as far as can be ascertained, no such stipulation has recently been advanced by Mr. Seargeant.

Many citizens have thought that the interests of the taxpayers would not have been sacrificed if the draft agreement drawn up by the city solicitor last year had been a trifle less stringent, particularly as before any money is paid over to the company the property owners have a right to pronounce upon the whole matter. There was, for example, the clause providing for all the workmen employed by the company living within the city limits, and the clause relating to the measurement and valution of the new works by the company's engineer. These and other stipulations may yet be varied, so as to meet the desires of the company while not imperiling the bylaw at the polls. It is a very important question, and cannot be too earnestly considered by those charged with its disposal.

THE cable announces that there was much beating of drums in the royal wedding procession in England. We shall expect to see an editorial condemnation of the pernicious practice in the London Free Press. Or are the censures of our contemporary reserved for the Young Liber drum corps?

SOMETHING LIKE PROGRESS. Thursday the British House of Common made phenomenal progress with the measure itnow seems that the time when the bill will be sent to the House of Lords is measurably

The

Seeing the most important clauses of the measure have been passed, and all parties know that the bill must be reported to the other House by the last day of this month, it is opportune to take stock of the situation The bill consists of a preamble, 40 clauses and seven schedules, the whole running to 30 pages of printed matter. Much unnecessary time was spent on the first four clauses. Over a month was exhausted by the Opposition in proposing amendments, many of which were senseless, and in making long drawn out addresses on every conceivable aspect of the question. At the same time, two points were made evident beyond ques-tion: Lord Salisbury has pledged himself that no matter how the bill is amended he will see that the House of Lords throws it of the action may be gleaned from a few statistics regarding the amendments thus disposed of. When clause 4 was passed 673 amendments remained for consideration. To clause 5, which dealt with the executive authority of the Irish Legislature, 84 amendments were proposed; to clauses 6, 7 and 8, affecting the constitution of the Legislature, 143 amendments were suggested. All these have been swept away at one sitting, bringing the House down to a consideration of the proposed financial arrangements, which is certain to result in considerable discussion, Nevertheless, the progress now being made is an earnest that the bill will be sent to the House of Lords by the 31st inst. the House of Lords by the sist inst.

Whether the hereditary chamber will reject it right off, or will endeavor to bring it into disrepute by loading it up with amendments unacceptable to the popular body, remains to be seen. In all probability, Lord Salisbury will move that the measure be thrown out on the second reading, and thrown out it will be, for in the privileged chamber, the Conservatives are in the majority. While the Lords are discussing the Home Rule Bill the Commons will have under consideration the reform measures promised in the Newcastle programme, which promise to be equally unpalatable to the other House. How long a period will elapse before the obstacles put in the way of the representatives of the people by the non-elective chamber compel an appeal to the country it is difficult to prophesy. But for economy is but a mere sentiment. It is just as well to understand that this is not so. The farmers who are seven-tenths of the population demand it. They know that without it the monopolists will continue to fatten at their expense, and the city workers are also aroused to the fact that every expedient to cripple the purchasing power of their best customers is an indirect blow at their interests. There is more than sen-timent behind the movement in favor of radical tariff reduction. There is determination to carry the work through. The people refuse longer to be goaded by the men who contracted to make them rich by taxing them. They now demand that they be given a chance by the removal of every tax that is not required to produce sufficient money to run the Government. To accomplish this Hon. Wilfrid Laurier and his associates are pledged, and no reasonable man who desires the prosperity of Canada will put an obstacle in their way or insinuate that they will not keep their word, until such time as they prove re creant to the trust that will be reposed in them.

WE sympathize with those Radicals who. in the British House of Commons, opposed the establishment of a legislative council, or upper chamber, in the Irish Legislature. is a model Province, and is con ssedly well governed, and that with but one legislative body.

THERE was nothing in our cablegrams about the Imperial bye-election in the Swansea district to fill the vacancy caused conferring local government on Ireland, and | by the elevation of Sir H. Hussey Vivian to ne peerage. The Conservatives, it seems did not put forward a candidate, and Mr. William Williams, a well-known Liberal, was elected by acclamation.

Table Talk has ts quarters in the electrical kitchen of the its quarters in the electrical kitchen of the White City, and the White City is vividly depicted in the pages of this magazine, as Mrs. M. C. Myer talks to the "Fair Pilgrims," and Mrs. Grayson tells what to do "When you go to the Fair." Helen Louise Johnson also guides housekeepers through several of the departments, as well as gives them the usual monthly menus, and conducts the "Housekeeper's Inquiry Department" in her usual valuable and helpful manner. (Philadelphia Table Talk Publishing Company.)

In the current number of the Engineer ing Magazine (New York) 30 pages are devoted to the sculptors of the World's Fair, that no matter how the bill is amended he will see that the House of Lords throws it out, while nearly all the Conservative leaders have been boasting in the country that their wish is not to improve the measure, but to bring it into disfavor. To such a degraded position have these partisans dragged the greatest deliberative body in the world!

Taking advantage of the closure rule placed upon the statute books by the last Conservative Government, Mr. Gladstone is enforcing the resolve that Parliament shall no longer be trifled with. Hence the grams. The House passed clauses 5, 6, 7, and 8 in the course of one sitting, thus in a continuous properties.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN.

I was in Port Stanley this week and took stroll over that charming spot called New Orchard Beach. I was not agreeably sur-prised to find that about half the pretty prised to find that about half the pretty cottages were boarded up and were for sale or to let. Perhaps when the railway clouds roll by and cheap fares become an inducement this once thriving settlement will again flourish as its natural beauties and advantages entitle itto. There are numbers of houses in other parts of the village that are empty for the first time in years.

The back doors of most houses in this city which have a drain are ornamented with a ventilating pipe ending two or three with a ventilating pipe ending two or three feet above the ground. What are these pipes for? My attention has been drawn to the specimen bylaw provided for all municipalities by the Public Health Act, which is substantially the same as the city bylaw (page 28 of the new bylaws), which provides that all ventilating pipes shall be carried above the roof. It would be difficult to remedy past defects, but there is no reason why all new houses should not have their pipes constructed in accordance with the city bylaw.

When walking up Talbot street the other evening, and just as I had arrived near Albert street, I had a rather unusual and enjoyable experience. It is not often that ladies are seen in male attire espethat ladies are seen in male attire especially on the public streets. On this occasion there were two couples under the glare of the electric light. It was plainly noticeable that two of the four persons were females clad in men's suits. They were, however, unable to conceal all of their hair under their hats. As I caught up to them and having discovered what has just been related, I politely said "Good evening, boys." It was laughable to see those four fair damsels scamper off at a lively rate towards their home, which, by the way, was not far distant. It was a good picce of fun for all concerned.

From time immemorial the many mode of resuscitating a person who has been drowned or almost drowned, have been drowned or almost drowned, have been discussed in the public press. I will not attempt to renew this discussion or even to suggest any new points, but would just in many cases where bodies have been in the water less than an hour. True, there is probably only one case in a thousand where life can be restored after this length of time has expired; but why should there not be more? Once after working eight and a half hours physicians revived a man who was supposed to be dead. On Wednesday a pupil of the Strathroy Collegiate Institute was drowned in the river in that town. His body lay in the water not more than three-quarters of an hour, and yet when it was recovered no attempt whatever was made to resuscitate him, although there was a doctor on the spot. Was this not rather peculiar, and would not the drowned boy's relatives have been able to bear their bereavement better had the onlookers made some attempt to gestore their son to life? discussed in the public press. 1 will not

THE YOUNG MEN.

[St. John N. B. Telegraph.]
The London Free Press, which is undertood to be the home organ of Sir John stood to be the home organ of Sir John Carling, seems to think that the young men were far too prominent in the big Liberal convention. But the Free Press forgets how many young men of fine talents the Liberal party has within its ranks. And we are sure that the older Liberals present, from Sir Oliver Mowat down, were especially pleased and gratified with the active, earnest spirit, and the capacity for public discussion evinced by the young men who took part in the proceedings.
