CHASE & SANBORN,

MONTREAL AND BOSTON.

But these memories of the past, which had so long lain dormant, and which had been so strangely and suddenly aroused to torture her, were too much for her, and she again broke forth, with passionate rebellion quivering in every tone.
"Why was my life ruined?" she cried, her proud face paling, her lips trembling with pain, "why could not my fate have been like that of other women—a happy wife, a loving mother? Oh, for youth der woman, and now I am hard—as hard as a rock; there is but one green spot in all my barren nature, and only my darling has kept that from becoming an arid waste, like the rest of it. Oh, what desolation one wrong, one sin, can make in a life, which otherwise might have been almost an ideal life."

She had spoken rapidly and in a light,

Langford, Miss Katherine Kavanagh's lovely niece, was the only offspring of this marriage, but she was left an orphan at an early age, and became the special charge of her aunt, and the one object of her pride and love. But we shall learn more of the personal history of these two later on.

How long Miss Kavanagh would have indulged in her outburst of grief is un-certain, if the opening and shutting of a distant door had not suddenly aroused

I have not shed a tear before for long years. Ah!" with a long-drawn sigh, "I wish I had not returned to New York. A broker might have settled that business well enough, and yet I lenged to see my native once more. But," with a resolute "let me once get safely back to England with Belle, and I will never set foot on American soil again."

Ah, Miss Kavanagh, when you said that you ignored the old French proverb, "L'homme propose, mais Dieu dispose."

Passing, as she spoke, into her dressing-room, which led from the boudoir, she hastily bathed her flushed cheeks and eyes, and had barely dried her face again when she heard a light rap upon her door, and a silvery voice cried out: Auntie, my practice is done. May I

The change in the proud woman was stantaneous and almost magical as she heard the request.

Her face softened, a tender light sprang her eyes, her lips were wreathed with smiles

"Yes, darling, in just one moment I will let you in," she responded, and, after smoothing her hair, which had become somewhat disarranged, she returned to where she drew down other room, where she drew down shades, that the strong light might not betray her recent emotion; then she unlocked and threw open the door for her niece to enter.

Her golden hair hung in rich profusion about her shoulders, her cheeks were slightly flushed from running upstairs, her eyes were beaming with content, because the deaded hour of daily practice was over, and she was smiling in anticipation of a "cosy time with auntie," for she was never happier than with her. "Only one," returned Miss Kavanagh, returned Miss Kavanagh, "Well, tell me what the smiling archly. problem is, and perhaps I can help you to solve it.'

"You love me so well—you are always good and kind to me. Auntie Kate, that -I can't help wondering why you never were married, and had little girls of your own to love."

Miss Kavanagh caught her breath sharply—a pain, like the thrust of a sharp knife, for a moment rending her heart at this unexpected turn of their It was very strange, she reflected that her niece should thus echo the very thoughts that had been running riot in her own mind only a few moments be fore. She quickly repressed all outward manifestation of her emotion, and again manifestation of her emotion, and again assuming the same light tone in which she had previously spoken, she said:

"At last the question has come, and Lady Isabelle Langford wants to know why her aunt is an old maid."

"Don't auntie, call yourself an 'old maid," Belle returned, making a little grimace over the obnoxious term. "You aren't old—there isn't single gray hair

ATHLETICS.

LONDON ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION. A meeting was held in the Grand Pacific Hotel last night by those interested in the formation of the new athletic association, the purpose being to discuss the questions of incorporation and the building of the new rink. The result is that application will be made at as early a date as possible for a writ of incorporation under the name of the London Athletic Association. It was also decided to push the work of securing subscriptions of stock in the association. The intention is not to carry on building operations

In the application for incorporation as a limited stock company, provisional directors were elected as follows: Messrs. John Purdom, Sam Stevely, William T. Edge, Charles E. Sterling, H. C. McBride, G. de C. O'Grady, Ea. Struthers, H. Gillies, Lina, Reea and Campbell.

Architect McBride, whose plans have been accepted, will at once begin work upon the remodeling of the Chapter House, and the proposed layout of the lawns, etc. Everytning will probably be completed by midsummer next.

RULES FOR POLE VAULT. New York, Nov. 19.-At the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, which is being held in New York, the following rules were made in regard to pole vaulting:

The height or the bar at starting and at each successive elevation shall be determined by the omicials. Three tries shall be allowed at each height. 26th, a Each competitor shall make an attempt in the order in which his name appears on the programme, then those wno failed shall have a second trial in regular order, and those failing on this trial shall take their final trial.

Displacing the bar counts as a try. A line shall be drawn 15 feet in front of the bar and parallel with it, crossing this line in an attempt shall be a balk. Two balks constitute a try. Leaving the ground in an attempt shall constitute a try. A competitor may omit his trials at any height, but if he fails at the next height he shall not be allowed to go back and try the height he omitted.

The poles shall have no assisting devices except that they may be wound or wrapped with any substance for the purpose of affording a firmer grasp, and may have one spike at the lower end. No competitor shall during his over six fences; two at five feet, two vault raise the hand which was upper- at five feet six inches, and two at most when he left the ground to a higher point on the pole, nor shall he higher point on the pole, nor shall he raise the hand which was undermost years; owner, George Pepper, Toronto, the face, under lip white, left from the left the ground to any point. when he left the ground to any point

Strong Opposition to Having It Piped

Away to Windsor. Windsor, Nov. 21 .- The proposition to supply Windsor with natural gas from the wells lately discovered at Wheatley is meeting with strong opposition, and it is said to be very unlikely that the United Gas and Oil Company will be able to obtain a franchise fuel to Windsor. M. K. Cowan, M. P. and Manager S. A. King, of the gas company, visited Romney township in a vain endeavor to obtain permission from the council.

At Leamington the supply is scarce and may give out at any time. At present gas is only used for cooking purposes.
